IN WALL STREET.

The Bulls Hold their Own and Villard Stocks Advance Slightly

NEW YORK, Oct 24.—Stocks strong, state securities dull. The squeeze of shorts begun last week made further progress to-day. At the opening the market was buoyant and got beyond the control of the bulls for a short time. The posting figures were ½@1½ per cent above the close of Tuesday night. Rock Island and Michigan Central led the upward movement. Among other stocks conspicuous for strength were Union Pacific, which rose 1½ to 91; Michigan Central 1 to 89¾; Missouri Pacific 1½ to 95; C B & Q 1¾ to 126; St Paul 1½ to 98½, and Reading to 50¼. About 11 o'clock traders showed a disposition to take profits and a decline of ⅛ to 1½ per cent took place.

All Villard's are advanced upon the announcement in Wall street that the news had not yet found its way from the court rooms that application had been made for an injunction to prevent the issue of second mortgage bonds of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company. This strength to these shares was regarded as showing that large holders as also officials of the road attach no importance to the legal proceedings. Indeed Samuel Wilkinson, secretary of the company, said that this attempt at serving an injunction is simply an empty bubble, and added that the Northern Pacific Company is impregnable and is as strong as the rock of Gibraltar against any attack that may be brought against them.

As the day advanced the upward movement gained force, and in the last hour intense excitement prevailed owing to the efforts of some of the bears to cover. The Vanderbilt shares, Oregon Transcontinental, Western Union, Lackawanna, Missouri Pacific and Northern Pacific continued the features of the market.

MONEY, STOCKS AND BONDS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Money 2½; prime mercantile paper, 6@7; sterling exchange, bankers bills dull at $4 80½, demand $4 85¼. Threes, 130; 4½s, [illegible]; 4s, 21¾.

American Express 89; Canada Southern 54; Central Pacific 66¾; Chicago, Burlington and Quincy 125¾; Delaware, Lackawanna and Western 17½; Denver and Rio Grande 26¾; Hannibal and St Joe 40 asked; Kansas and Texas 23¾; Lake Shore 99¾; Louisville and Nashville 40¾; Michigan Central, 94¾; New Jersey Central 86¾; Northern Pacific 50¾; Northwestern, 23¾; Ohio and Mississippi 28¾; Reading 52¾; Rock Island, 21; St. Paul 98¾; Texas Pacific 22¾; Union Pacific 90¾; United States Express 68; Wabash 20¾; Pacific Mail 37; Panama, 98; Fargo 12; Western Union 78¾; Petroleum steady 9¾.

THE SECOND MORTGAGE BONDS

Suits Brought to Enjoin the Northern Pacific from Issuing Them.

NEW YORK, Oct 24.—Three suits have been brought against the Northern Pacific Company to-day by Dunning, Edsell, Hart & Fowler and by Anderson & Howland. The object of the suits is to prevent the issue of new second mortgage bonds. The ground taken is that the original act of incorporation prohibits the company from making any mortgage or issuing any construction bonds without the consent of congress. Congress gave its consent in 1870 that the company might issue construction bonds and secure them by mortgage. Under that consent Jay Cooke's mortgage was made which was subsequently foreclosed. The position taken by the plaintiffs is that the authority of congress once exercised was exhausted and could not be repeated. An order to show cause with a stay was granted in two suits and the argument will be heard November 13. One of the suits against the company was brought by F J Bradley, who is a holder of common stock, and the suit of no great importance. He asks that the company be enjoined from issuing bonds or making mortgages until congress gives its consent. This consent was given long ago and Bradley has no standing. He had 200 shares of common stock transferred to him Saturday in order to bring the suit.

It is understood that the Northern Pacific bond syndicate consulted the best legal talent obtainable before taking up the new second mortgage bonds, and it is further stated that no such injunction can stand under the charter of the company, if three-quarters of the preferred stockholders consent to issue the mortgage.

GETTING READY FOR THE LOAN.

NEW YORK, Oct 24.—It is stated that the opening of the Oregon and Transcontinental books will show 60,000 shares transferred and taken from the street. Over $30,000,000 of Northern Pacific preferred stock proxies are already issued for the consummation of the loan.

CARPET-BAG GOVERNORS.

The New York "Times" Commends President Arthur's Resolution to Appoint Governors for Territories from Their own Population.

NEW YORK, Oct 24—[Special.]—The Times says: One of the substantial traits of the president's journey through the northwest is his resolve that hereafter he will appoint no more carpet baggers as territorial governors. It is a pious resolution and has been affirmed by many predecessors of the president. Arthur nevertheless, had the old way of sending to the territories as executive officers disappointed and unsuccessful politicians from other states, which has been persevered in without variation. It is reasonable to suppose that the active and enterprising population of territories would furnish at least one man competent to be governor, to say nothing of the secretary, marshal and territorial judges. But Nevada has furnished a governor of Arizona, New Hampshire has sent the illustrious Ordway to Dakota, and New York is responsible for J. Schuyler Crosby of Montana, as well as chief justice of New Mexico. A broken down and defeated politician seeks territorial appointment for two reasons. Being poor he makes some money in being a specula[illegible] which is rife in a new community, and he will be on hand early in case the territory blooms into a full grown state, with two senators, a representative and a governor to elect. The late Nye of Nevada was one of the few lucky ones to profit by this sudden transformation of a territory from its tadpole state. The Crimmyes and Newells represent nothing but the lame ducks of politics. The territorial governors for the most part, are men who have failed at home and are sent to govern distant communities by way of rebuke to the constituencies who have repudiated them. Territorial offices are filled with political exiles and refugees. A person who insists on reform in this direction will deserve the plaudits of his fellow-countrymen.

THE EPISCOPAL CONVENTION.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct 24.—In convention the house of deputies, on the state of the church, made a report in regard to the resolution that certain clergymen were in the habit of practicing ceremonies not authorized by the book of prayer, that as the subject is beyond its control this committee requests to be discharged from further consideration of the subject. The request was granted.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 24.—The committee on expenses presented resolutions that in future each diocese should provide for the expenses of its bishop and clerical deputies attending the convention. Personal expenses should be borne by the presbytery or the people. The bishops concurring, the house adjourned until the evening of the 26th after reading of the pastoral letter.

The trustees of several theological seminaries were named. Rev Dr Gray of Tennessee addressed the convention relative to the Suwanee conference. He moved to amend the report of the committee on canons, as follows: That the board of managers be urged to appropriate $50,000 for work among the colored people and that amount be distributed among the dioceses in proportion to the colored population. Defeated and the resolution of the committee adopted.

The report of the committee on prayer books was taken up on reassembling. A committee appointed to recommend due observation of the centennial period of the American church reported that members of the church will be called upon to commemorate with fitting solemn observance the centennial of the consecration of Samuel Seabury by the bishops of the church in 1784. The committee called upon the church, to note this as a day of solemn observance noted in ecclesiastical annals and show gratitude to God by liberal gifts to all great charities of the church. The report was adopted.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 24.—The committee on the state of churches, in its final report, stated that there are now in the Protestant Episcopal church in the United States 48 dioceses and 19 missionary jurisdictions, 67 bishops, 3500 other clergy, 3000 organized parishes and more than 334,000 communicants.

CRIMINAL.

A FATHER KILLS A FAMILY, THEN HIMSELF.

NEWCOMERSTOWN, Ohio, Oct. 24.—Last night a carpenter named Fritzer, 27 years old, living near here, arose from bed in a fit of sudden insanity, it is supposed, and while his family lay sleeping took a razor and cut from ear to ear his wife's throat. His wife was two years younger than himself. He also cut the throat of a ten months babe lying by its mother's side. He next went to a crib where his two daughters, 2 and 4 years old, were and cut their throats. Afterwards he undertook to cut his own throat, but not succeeding he used a heavily loaded shotgun and fired the contents into his own face, blowing his head off.

TWO MEN MURDERED.

GALVESTON, Oct. 24.—The News Eagle pass special says: The robbed and mutilated remains of two unknown Americans were found on the Mexican side twenty five miles from here. The United States consul at Piedras Negras is investigating the case.

ACCIDENTS.

DROWNED WHILE SKATING.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 24.—[Special.]—Three children named Ingris, the oldest girl aged 12 years, were drowned in a pond at Elkhorn, Manitoba, to-day. The girl was on the pond skating when the ice broke. Two younger brothers tried to save her and all perished in the presence of the mother on the bank.

TWO MORE VICTIMS.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Oct. 24.—Two more victims are to be added to yesterday's explosion at Kingston. Mary Quinn and Hattie Moss died this morning, in terrible agony.

BUSINESS FAILURES.

ANOTHER CLOTHING FAILURE.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 24.—The wholesale clothing house of Moses Troutman & Co. has failed. Liabilities $150,000. The firm has confessed judgment for cash advances of $40,000. Their property is in the custody of the sheriff.

Going to; but Don't.

St Louis Globe-Democrat.

The year before the presidential election the democrats are always "going to win;" but the year of the presidential election they always don't win.

"Ten years ago the name of Lydia E. Pinkham was scarcely known outside of her native state. To-day it is a household word all over the continent and many who read the secular and religious journals have become familiar with the face that shines on them with a modest confidence, in which we read the truth that Nothing ill can dwell in such a temple.

PROHIBITION AND ABOLITION.

Reply to a Favorite Argument of the Prohibitionists.

New York Times.

A mistaken assumption is the beginning of an argument des[illegible] the whole of Mr. James Denaton, whose letter on Temperance and Prohibition appears in another column, has fallen into an error of this kind. He wishes to convince the Times that in treating the prohibitionists as the whigs treated the anti slavery men thirty years ago it is on the wrong side. The Tribune and all the lesser whig journals of the time, says he, charged the anti slavery voters then with the defeat of Clay just as you now charge the republican defeat in Ohio to the temperance voters.

But the liberty party which could muster only 62,300 votes for James G. Birney in 1844, merged itself in the free-soil party and the latter in the republican party, which waxed so strong, on the utterance of the awakened and powerful anti-slavery feeling of the country, that it obliterated the whig organization, and in 1860 overthrew the democrats. Will not the prohibitionists do something like that? Ought they not to pursue a steadfast course of their own till the conscientious voters in sufficient numbers join them to win? If they do, ours is this course and why Mr. Densmore is evidently afraid that republicans who accept the Times' view of their course will go to join the whigs in a well deserved oblivion.

We presume that a good many sincere and conscientious men are looking at the prohibition movement very much in this way. The mistake they make is in assuming that two things are alike that are really quite unlike. The prohibitionists do not stand on the same ground the abolitionists occupied. There is room for two opinions about the use of wine and spirits. A man may use both in moderation and be quite as worthy of respect as his totally abstaining neighbor. But slavery was utterly abominable, and among disinterested and humane men there was but one opinion about it. There is no such thing as slavery in moderation. A man must be a slave or a freeman, and when the movement for the abolition of slavery was once under way it had no logical or moral stopping place short of the emancipation proclamation. The liquor agitation will, because it must, stop short of the absolute prohibition of the manufacture, sale and use of spirituous and malt liquors. The tastes and habits of men differ too widely and the number of those who insist on liberty of personal action is too large to admit of any other issue of the contest.

Moreover there can be no sectional division upon this question. Prohibitionists will probably admit that the summary method which the south forced the north to employ for the extinction of slavery is not applicable to the abuse of intoxicating liquors. Mr Densmore's obvious misconstruction and misreadings of the Times' comments on the Ohio and Iowa elections hardly call for correction. The position of this journal in respect to the liquor question is pretty well known. It does not approve of prohibitory laws because experience shows they cannot be enforced and they tend to aggravate some of the worst evils of intemperance. But it does believe in rigid restriction of the liquor traffic to be proper and necessary. And it is convinced that the legislative action already taken by the republican party in Ohio is wiser than the policy of prohibition.

NO MONEY, NO GRUB

How Tally is Kept of all the People in New York Hotel Dining Rooms

The opportunities for stealing a dinner in one of the big New York hotels are not promising. The arrangements have been so thoroughly perfected that it would be pleasanter for a man to suffer the pangs of incipient starvation than risk the mental wear and tear and physical harm incident to the theft.

For some years hotel beats flourished in New York. They lounged about the corridors of their favorite hostelries, often had their letters addressed to the office and were so much on hand that the employes of the house supposed they were regular patrons. Then the hotels began a regular crusade against them and they have been relegated to the free lunch counters of the more prosperous saloons.

The same system is now in vogue at all the city hotels. The head waiter is the sentry of the dining room. Five minutes before the dinner a list of the guests of the hotel is sent up stairs to the head waiter. On the list is the number of every room in the hotel with the name of the occupant (if any) opposite. The head waiter stands by the door and when a guest comes in he is asked quietly the number of his room. He gives it and the waiter instantly sends him to a table. The man if he thinks of it at all supposes that the number of his room has something to do with his seat and passes on. The list is then taken to the head waiter, and if the number he has given is vacant, or if it is occupied by some one known to the waiter, he goes at once to the man and while deftly rearranging the napkin or placing the knives and forks in rows asks him to give his name. If that name fails to clear away the doubt the clerk is sent for. He may recognize the man. If he does not an investigation is made and if the man is proved a fraud he is taken out and handed over to the police.

The head waiters of the hotels are usually men of good discrimination and seldom make mistakes. They seldom make a mistake, but when they do, all pop up their errors are clothed in such suavity and gentleness that even the professional beats cannot get angry with them.

A COLORED MAN'S VIEWS

PORTLAND, Oct. [illegible]

To the Editor of the Oregonian:

I regret very much the decision of the supreme court of the United States concerning the privileges of our race. But it should not embitter our feelings against the republican party, who were the first in giving cognizance to our rights as American citizens. With a great many others I am sorry that our representatives in public affairs have so small scope, but I hope the true hearted friends of this republic will not see the freedom and equal rights for which so many good men, including thousands of our own race, gave up their lives, taken from us.

If the republican party, which was first in the cause of liberty, will continue to do its duty towards us, I am of the opinion that it will not lose the fealty of the colored race. Our people will hesitate to cast their votes in favor of the democratic party which rules in the south and maintains the color line there as the action taken by the Georgia railroad plainly shows. We need no elaborate review of the history of the last thirty years to show that the friends of the rights of our race are republicans.

EDWARD A. SIMMONS.

A Sad Duty

Astorian, Oct. 24.

On the arrival of the Queen here on her regular trip on the 1st inst. Captain Alexander, her popular commander, was so ill with pneumonia that by the advice of Dr. Baker he came ashore for medical treatment. The attack grew more serious and as the days went by grave doubts were felt as to his possible recovery. On the 8th came the sad news that his wife had died in San Francisco that afternoon and owing to his precarious condition it was deemed best to keep him in ignorance of that melancholy intelligence. Accordingly he was most sedulously hindered from learning anything about it until yesterday afternoon when he being able for the first time to get out on the street Dr. Baker concluded it was about time to let him know. It was a delicate and disagreeable task to apprise a man who had written a cheery and encouraging letter to his wife but the day before that beloved wife was lying cold in death; but it had to be done and with the utmost care he was told. The shock was a severe one and his mental suffering was in itself a grief to witness. Sadly he asked for the particulars and as they were related it indeed seemed a mistaken kindness to have kept the news from him. Dr. Baker has devoted the greatest care to the captain's case and thinks that with proper precaution there is no fear of a relapse. The captain will probably go to San Francisco on the return trip of his vessel.

More Talk About Ohio

Albany Evening Journal.

That Judge Foraker should have been defeated by only a few thousand votes in a poll of three-quarters of a million with both the saloon interest and the prohibition interest actively against him affords a far more striking demonstration of strength of republicanism in Ohio than would have been given by his success under ordinary circumstances. In the unprecedented defections from the republican ranks on local issues could do no more than barely defeat the party, then it is stronger in Ohio than it was when either William Allen or Richard Bishop was elected governor, or when Mr Tilden came within a few thousand votes of getting its electors in 1876—strong enough to carry the state by an old fashioned union majority in a presidential year. Twelve months hence there will be no liquor or anti liquor question to be settled in Ohio. The one issue will be whether the citizens of Ohio are ready to help hand the nation over to democratic control. On that issue both the Germans, who found the Scott law too rigorous, and the prohibitionists, who thought it too mild, will vote again with their own party—and then where will the democracy be?

The Oregon Pioneers

Newark Evening News.

The "60 Oregon pioneers," the youngest of them a settler of 1854, who have just arrived in New York on an excursion, could tell some wonderful stories of progress, heroism and trial. Turning their faces towards the setting sun in the days when the star of empire shone but very dimly in the west they have lived to see stately cities grow up where they corralled their wagon trains on a pathless prairie, to see railroad tracks along their old trail, art and culture where they fought with painted savages and populous industry where they found a wilderness. More honor should be paid to them than to half the lords or bewigged justices from across the Atlantic. They are the men who have planted new stars in the flag, sown the seeds of civilization, reform and liberty and watched and guarded their work till the wastes blossomed. Not knowing, perhaps, the long tide of their work through danger, privation and sacrifice they toiled on, and the whole land has shared in their reward.

Besides this about 1000 bushels were tramped out, making the total amount thrashed in the county about [illegible] bushels.

The Yakima Record: We learn from sources to be relied upon that the twenty five miles of grade under contract by Mr. B[illegible] is nearly finished. There are about 300 men at work on the Columbia river bridge and the work is progressing rapidly. The bridge is expected to be completed by the 1st of April. Cars may be running on the twenty five miles this side within two months.

Walla Walla Statesman: In a conversation with a gentleman well posted with the management of the O. R. & N. MR. BLAINE'S BIG HOUSE.

Why he Does not Occupy It—His Forthcoming Book

A Washington letter to the New York World says: Every year finds this city improving in the number of good houses built for private residences. The great rush to building has come within the last ten years. There is a greater variety in the style than in almost any city in the Union. There are but few houses alike and comparatively few built in rows. The great variance in the shapes of the houses and the open spaces and lawns surrounding many of them present pleasant pictures to the ourist. The oddity of many of the houses and the bizarre taste often employed give the town the appearance of an abode of pleasure rather than plain dull business which is inclined to build according to conservative plans. Every wealthy people Washington has come to be regarded as a winter resort. The taxes here are relatively low. The wealthy classes who come here to stay invest their surplus reserves in United States bonds and so live more cheaply here than they could anywhere else while they have at the same time greater social advantages than they could find at home.

None of the latter day houses built in Washington are very expensive ones. There are but few of the so-called palaces found in the commercial cities. The average house does not cost over $10,000 or $20,000.

The house that has been the most talked about is the one begun by Mr. Blaine when he was secretary of state. This has been called palatial, because it is large and cost much more money than any of the modern houses of Washington. It cost $80,000 including the lot upon which it stands facing the wide Dupont circle where Sena or Stewart built his castle several years ago. This circle was long known as the Honest Miner's Camp. Mr Stewart when he built here went far beyond the then fashionable locality and his house stood alone for some years. Stewart found the very next year that he could not afford to live in his house. It has been shut practically, for a number of years, the moths making high havoc with the imported blue satin covered furniture.

Blaine's house is nearly in the shadow of his ill fated castle. It stands upon a high terrace about six feet above the street. It is built of red brick and common at the same time. There are twenty four rooms in it all large, as if made with the view of entertaining large companies. When this house was planned Blaine was a great figure in American politics. He was the dominating will of the Garfield administration. In all important matters he wielded the power of the chief magistrate. With his passionate love of power and great ambition Blaine resolved to cull to his advantage all the aids of social life. He said he would build for himself a splendid house where the brilliancy of the receptions and the gifts of the hostess would overshadow even the White house clouded by the small means of the Garfield family and the active dislike of Mrs. Garfield to anything like social display. In everything Blaine is a great speculator. He bought land quietly about the place where he intended to build and then permitted it to be known that he was going to build a great house there. Skillful real estate agents blew this fact through large horns, and the lots around about went up rapidly so when Mr. Blaine came to sell out he was able to clear the price of his own lot.

Guiteau's bullet found him with this house on his hands. Blaine at first resolved to sell it outright but the social ambition of his wife opposed. He sold it once and went into the new house. The family soon found that it was too pretentious and too large. They were overwhelmed with visitors from all parts of the world. The family had no official engagement to protect their privacy. Nine servants were required and they were too much for even Mrs. Blaine, who when spring came said she was tired of keeping a hotel. If her husband had had some office to position to sustain the social prestige, it might have compensated her. When he went away the summer Mrs Blaine had resolved to give up the house she lately. Mr Blaine who is hard at work on his book consented to selling it to have, The family then sent to [illegible] to leave it with the cabinet [illegible] his place in Leiter, the Chicago millionaire. Leiter who is a dendy is said [illegible] to secure a place in the cabinet of the next democratic administration. The rent is $11,000, and the payment of the taxes. This is a good percentage upon his investment. Furniture and all must be just let it for $100,000.

He is certain to make a very handsome sum of money on his history of From Lincoln to Garfield. The book is to be sold by subscription. Blaine is to have $1 on each volume. From the orders already in the publishers feel perfectly confident of selling 200,000 volumes at the very least. As Mr. Blaine has other works on the stocks of a historical character it will be seen that he is in every near starvation whatever may happen to what he has already acquired.

The chief clerk at the Union Depot hotel, Ogden, Utah, Mr. J. D. Taylor, had rheumatism in the muscles of his chest and left shoulder. By applying St. Jacobs Oil three days he realized complete restoration to health.

It is reported at Yakima that Weeks, late of the Missoula division of the Northern Pacific, supersedes Kingsbury on the Cascade branch.

The Chinese Government Aiding Fraud Against the Restriction Law

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 24.—Additional instances of frauds perpetrated by Chinese government officers to evade the restriction act have been brought to light to-day. The steamer Rio Janeiro which arrived on the 21st brought seventy seven Chinamen holding traders' certificates issued them by the Chinese government, which under the treaty entitled them to land in the United States. In a majority of cases it was evident that the holders of these certificates were nothing but common laborers, but the custom's inspectors said that they were bound to recognize the Chinese government certificates, with the exception of five, all came ashore. The City of Tokio arrived yesterday bringing 111 more Chinamen, all holding similar Chinese government trader certificates. They are questioned as to their occupation before being landed, but so long as they stick to the assertion that they are traders, the authorities have no help for it but to let them land. By their answers it is apparent that most of them have been coached as to what they must reply. Occasionally, as in the case of two actors to-day they let slip something which condemns them. Among to-day's arrivals are two boys 8 years of age holding students' certificates. They could not remember the name of the college they purposed attending. Women claimed by resident Chinese as their wives are also among the arrivals.

Progress of DeLesseps's Work at Panama.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 24.—To-morrow's Chronicle will publish the following: Among arrivals by the steamer Granada from Panama is Moses Wasserman, head storekeeper of the Panama Canal Company. In an interview he stated that there are now 8000 men employed on the canal, and he said that on December 1 when the rainy season would be over 6000 Jamaican laborers would arrive, when the real work of excavating at the Culebra passageway would be commenced under the direction of Mr. Dingler, chief engineer, who will be due at Colon on November 15. Every inch of ground on the isthmus has been surveyed, examined and measured. All estimates have been made, contracts concluded and means provided for insuring a grand success. The se[illegible] the grand [illegible] firmly believe that the canal will be finished by 1889, the date assigned by DeLesseps.

Dr. Glenn's Murderer Convicted

COLUSA, Oct. 24.—The Miller case was given to the jury at 3 P. M. After two hours a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree and fixing the punishment at life imprisonment was returned. On the first ballot the jury stood for hanging, three for imprisonment for life, three for murder in the second degree and two not guilty. The verdict is generally satisfactory as it is considered impossible to hang a man in Colusa county. It is said that counsel for defense will appeal the case.

Stage Robbers Caught

Marshall has made a confession to Captain Aull.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE AT CORVALLIS

A Frame Block, Sarrising Sol. King's Livery Stable, Destroyed. Heavy Excitement in the City.

[FROM THE OREGONIAN'S LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.]

CORVALLIS, Oct. 24

At [illegible] the livery stable in the [illegible] of the property of President Arnold of the State Agricultural College was discovered in flames. The alarm was given and the department was quickly on the ground. Hardly had the firemen reached the scene when the flames burst forth from the livery stable of Sol King, located on the principal street in the central part of town. The engine company promptly got to work and directed their attention to the livery fire but the flames had gained so great headway that nothing could be done to save the block, within which the stables were located. With the exception of one dwelling and a blacksmith shop the entire block was consumed.

The losses fall as follows: Sol King, two livery stables, carriages and six horses, $10,000, no insurance; J. E. Sorbin, saloon building, $2000, insurance on building and liquors $600, in North British and Mercantile, and $470 in Lion; Philip Phile, saloon building $1000, insurance $500; Cyrus Powers, saloon building and fixtures $1500, no insurance; B. T. Taylor, building $800, insurance $500.

This is the fourth time in the history of the town this block has been burned. During the progress of the fire the saloon of Brink & Wright was discovered on fire but extinguished. Last Saturday night fire was discovered in an old tannery and put out. Only a few weeks ago another old unoccupied building was burned out—all of which were undoubtedly the work of incendiaries. The town is in a state of intense excitement and should the perpetrators of these outrages be detected the people would deal out a summary and terrible vengeance. The municipal authorities have posted up hand bills offering a reward of $200 for the conviction of any persons setting fire to buildings within the city limits.

The Situation at Metlakahtla Dangerous

Matters at the Metlakahtla mission are in a disturbed and dangerous state. The bishop's adherents are few in number but are armed to the teeth and threaten a bloody retaliation if their houses which they desired to erect on the lines of the village street, are again moved. Their opponents are undeterred to be prepared for any emergency and to be determinedly bent upon meeting force with force. Immediate and vigorous action is necessary. The dominion government has been troubled too long with this most serious matter. Previous to the advent of the bishop, the village of Metlakahtla was the peaceful abode of a tribe of Christianized Indians who lived in harmony and enjoyed the fruits of well directed industry. Now it is disturbed by the acts of a few Indians who led by the bishop are endeavoring to usurp authority which they do not possess. The situation is becoming day by day more strange and dangerous.

Victoria's Prosperity

VICTORIA, Oct. 24.—The Colonist estimates the present population of Victoria at 9800, an increase of 2300 in eighteen months, and says all things point to an immediate further rise in the population of the city unparalleled in the British provinces, except at Winnipeg. The hotels are filled to overflowing, property has advanced and immigrants are arriving daily by the Northern Pacific railway. Building will be prosecuted vigorously during the winter months.

Reported Change in Mail Service

It is reported that the abandonment of the ocean mail service via San Francisco is contemplated and a daily mail via Puget sound substituted.

The U. P. and D. & R. G. Freight War

SALT LAKE, Oct. 24.—The freight war continues, but the Union Pacific now charges 60 cents a hundred from the Missouri river the same as the Denver and Rio Grande. Merchants are availing themselves of the cut and are ordering goods by telegraph. Merchants with large stocks fear the result, but think such a radical cut can't last long. Clark, superintendent of the Union Pacific, goes to Denver to-morrow to consult with the Denver & Rio Grande managers and the general impression is that old rates will be restored.

NOTES FROM THE DALLES.

[FROM THE OREGONIAN'S LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.]

THE DALLES, Oct. 23

The rustle of the falling leaf on the sidewalk tells its own tale.

Mr. H. H. Allen and family have gone to Yakima City, at which they will remain there this winter.

Mrs. L[illegible] and daughter have returned from Yakima and propose remaining in The Dalles.

The new directory of The Dalles, compiled by T. H. Ward & Co., is completed and seems to give general satisfaction.

Carrigan's rink last Saturday evening was thinly attended on account of the skating rink, which attracts and holds large crowds every Saturday.

The first issue of the Daily Wasco Sun (hebdo) came forth yesterday. If the following numbers do as well as the initial a large want will be supplied.

Captain L. C. [illegible], formerly receiver for the land office here, has returned to The Dalles and will probably make the place his home once more.

The last three or four nights have been cold, and the effects seen are heavy morning frosts. The ponds in the town vicinity have had a slight coating of ice.

John Michel, editor of the Times Mountaineer, who has been recreating on Five mile creek, came back to-day feeling much improved in health and carrying a long string of fish and game.

Our American Cousin by the Holland Comedy Company was well attended yesterday evening and duly appreciated. Many of the actors' faces are familiar ones and accordingly welcome.

The wife of Mr. I. C. Nicholsen died last Saturday and was buried yesterday. Mr. Nicholsen's many friends sympathize with him in his affliction. Mrs. Nicholsen had been here but a few weeks from Germany.

Mr. E. B. Johnson and Miss Ella Hood were married last Saturday evening at the Methodist church parsonage. Mr. Johnson has been prescription clerk in Waldron & Covilland's pharmacy for the past year and Miss Hood is the daughter of R. B. Hood, liveryman, of this city.

An Indian wanting a pair of boots and wanting them bad, thought he would try a civilized game on Whitman, the shoemaker, and accordingly walked off after he had fitted the boots to his overwhelming foot. This was on Saturday. He was found to-day and strenuously objected to yielding up the articles in question, but was finally persuaded by Crate, to do so, when he ducked suddenly, having a sort of intuition that something worse might happen should he remain long in one place.

NOTES FROM EUGENE.

[FROM THE OREGONIAN'S LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.]

EUGENE, Oct. [illegible]

Dr. Chase of Salem was in town this week.

J. E. Benton, an attorney of this city, went to Portland last Monday.

Mr. Renfrew of the McKenzie bridge who has been in town for a few days returned home yesterday.

George Miller, the son of Mrs. Allison Miller, who has been in Walla Walla for some time, is again in town.

Carlos O'Connor and William [illegible], students of the university, were arrested lately, the former for assault with a dangerous weapon and the two latter for carrying concealed weapons.

Drs. Chase and Shelton yesterday morning treated a little daughter of J. E. Atterbury for convergence of the eyes. The inner cords of the left eye were severed so that the ball straightened to its normal position. The little girl is doing well.

The scarlet fever is making sad havoc with the family of Jacob W. F. Walker who lives in the vicinity of Goshen in this county. Yesterday Mr. Walker buried one and one child was buried. These make four of the family who have died of this dreaded disease. Five more are now lying sick and doubts are entertained of the recovery of four of them. They are under treatment of Dr. Henry of Springfield.

I understand that Miss Nellie Ware of this place will go to The Dalles to teach a class in music. Miss Ware is doubtless the most accomplished young lady pianist in Eugene. She has been under the instruction formerly of Mr. [illegible] Courson of Portland and lately of Prof. Gunn of our city and was the most advanced pupil of the latter. Her friends wish her a pleasant and profitable year in her new sphere of usefulness.

The lecture by Rev. William G. Simpson at the M. E. church last Wednesday evening was heard with intense interest throughout. Sometimes the eloquence of the speaker and again his graphic descriptions of the incidents of all his own life or his witty references to and comparisons with the customs of our own country make his lecture on Scottish life and character one. He will lecture again on Wednesday evening, two weeks from that time. His subject will be William Wallace.

YAQUINA BAY NOTES.

[FROM THE OREGONIAN'S LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.]

NEWPORT, Oct 22

Miss Laura Thompson of this place left for Portland last Friday. She goes to attend the Mechanics fair.

Joe H[illegible] of the firm of Gardiner & Howard has returned after spending about three months in Portland.

Mrs. Trevitt, lately from California, is visiting her brother Mr. [illegible] James Bull, with whom she will spend the winter.

Mr. Winters and family of Eugene have moved to Yaquina City where they will spend the winter in search of health.

Mrs. P. M. Abby arrived home Saturday after an absence of six weeks to the valley where she has been visiting friends.

Mrs. Zeta Davis, who has been quite sick with the scarlatina, is slowly recovering. Mrs. Lena Davis is also recovering.

Mr. Eugene Williams has returned and will hereafter make this home in this city. Mr. Williams has been absent about two years, most of which time has been spent in California.

Owing to the extraordinary run of salmon there will be more salted than in former seasons. If provisions are as scarce as usual this winter it will prove a suitable article.

The hardware store of Walling & Wright after being closed for about a week or ten days owing to the resignation of Mr. John Earl has been reopened under the management of Mr. McGrue.

The Yaquina band having disbanded on account of some of its members moving away has reorganized under the leadership of Mr. Stout and will no doubt soon be able to delight the citizens with its music.

The abundance of game such as bear, deer, geese and ducks has attracted quite a number of sporting men to the vicinity, and judging from the continuous reports of game, they must be killing more than they want for immediate use.

The Katie and Ann arrived in yesterday with a full cargo of general merchandise, but was not able to bring the full order of any of our merchants. She will take a load to Portland of about one thousand bushels of oysters and hides & bones for a drug store.

Private letters have been received here lately stating that work will commence on the Oregon Pacific in a few days. Some of the business men here have increased their orders on the strength of the report, and it is the general opinion here that the report will prove true.

CLATSOP INDIAN CHIEF DEAD

Astorian, Oct. 24.

From Clatsop plains comes news that the Clatsop king is dead. Weighed down by years and the knowledge of cruel wrong, this ancient and dishonorable aboriginal has gone to his forefathers. He died on the 11th. He was once a mighty chief, the head of the Clatsop tribe and joyously roamed these forest wilds and gladly sucked down the succulent clam when our ancestors were cradled in their far off eastern homes. His name was Ca-ta-ta. He is gone. It is going or coming is not now of prime importance, but there was a time when he was an unholy terror and his arrival would make trouble in the family. Incidentally it may be mentioned that he has killed three wives and so interfered with the inside works of seven strong men of the tribe that their graves are green these many years by the sounding sea. Catata had he been a Caucasian, would have been styled a bad man. As it is he is a good Indian. Lot notice be done to his memory. It is said that he was a friend to the early settlers on Clatsop plains, never took any advantage of them and helped them in many ways. Catata was a lad when Lewis and Clark came out here nearly eighty years ago and remembered all about where they camped and how they looked. But he is gone to the happy hunting grounds and one of the few remaining links between the savagery of the past and the civilization of the present breaks with his departure.

The Lord Chief Justice and Mr. Flynn

Cincinnati Enquirer

When Lord Coleridge came down from breakfast yesterday morning he was accosted by a rough looking son of the old sod who had been waiting, for some time at the hotel door.

"Are you Lord Coleridge, yer honor?"

"I am, sir," replied his lordship with dignity.

"Lord Chafe Justice av England?"

"The same, my good man."

"I have a case before 'Squire Antony I would like yez to adjudge for me."

Lord Coleridge smiled faintly and moved off toward the reading room remarking that he did not have the time.

"Bedad yez must do it," urged the man in search of counsel. "I'm Mike Flynn of the Sixth ward and a blood[illegible] defier has beat me [illegible] and if [illegible] bracken doon h[illegible] face wid my ex [illegible]. [illegible] could me [illegible] wud take the case fur me."

At this point the clerk came to the rescue of his lordship and Mr. Flynn of the Sixth ward, was invited to take a walk.

Among the Churches

In the Methodist and Baptist churches of the south there are 1,500,000 negroes.

In China the Roman Catholic church has 41 bishops, 1 [illegible] priests (native [illegible]), 34 colleges, 34 convents and a Catholic population of 1,092,000.

Spurgeon says that it is possible for a man to be a Christian and belong to a brass band, but that it would be difficult for such a man's next door neighbor to be a Christian.

There are now about 1000 Italian Catholics in New Haven, Conn, and they have petitioned Bishop McMahon that a priest may be sent there to preach to them in their own tongue.

Ninety years ago $65 50 was the amount on the only subscription list in England to carry the gospel to the heathen. To-day the Methodists alone of England raise $1,000,000 a year for mission work.

THE AMERICAN EPISCOPATE.

PORTLAND, Oct. 24.

To the Editor of The Oregonian:

The American episcopate now numbers in its ranks some of the ablest men in the land, and is receiving through the public press such notice as its importance deserves. It is not the object of this article to excite controversy and so it will not go very deeply into the subject of Episcopal authority. That authority however, is not questioned by nineteen-twentieths of the Christian world. In the Jewish church and in the primitive Christian church, there were three orders of the ministry corresponding to the present order of bishops, priests and deacons, and the powers intrusted to them in the primitive church were identical with the functions exercised by the Episcopal clergy to-day.

There is no fact in the world better attested than this. In all the post apostolic writers we find proof clearly given that the church was governed by bishops. And we know that in the year 325, three hundred and eighteen bishops came together from all parts of the world to attend the first general council called by Constantine. The church nowhere in Asia, Africa or Europe, knew anything of any other ministry than an episcopally ordained ministry until the English and German reformation. Out of that reformation the English church came with her orders unimpaired and from the English church we have our own American episcopate.

We must say a few words further on this point. It is impossible to say with exactness who was the first preacher of the gospel in Great Britain. It may have been St. Paul himself. At any rate we know that the church when first planted in England was an Episcopal church—governed, that is by bishops, with the two other orders of ministers under them. We know this just as surely as we know any other fact relating to early England. We know that Christianity was early established in Great Britain because history contains the names of several English martyrs—as Aaron and Julius, citizens of the Welsh city of Caerleon, and Alban, an inhabitant of Verulam, in Hertfordshire. We know also that the church was Episcopal, because at the council of Arles in France called and held in the year 314, three British bishops were present. British bishops also attended other councils called by the emperor. We are especially informed that when Constantine had offered in 359 to pay the expenses of the bishops who attended the council of Rimini, the offer was rejected by all except the three bishops from Britain, who were too poor to take such a journey at their own individual expense. We also know that when Augustine in 595 landed in England he found there bishops who dated their consecration back to the earliest times. They owed no allegiance to Rome or its bishops. They had their own metropolitan and they were not disposed to submit to any exactions upon the part of any foreign bishop. That the bishop of Rome through the Norman conquest, finally obtained control of the English church everybody knows. But the first work of the reformation in the English church, was to declare its former independence of Rome and to deny that any foreign bishop had jurisdiction upon English soil. Her bishops began and her bishops completed the Anglican reformation.

As to our own episcopate. As soon as America was discovered, England began to send missionaries to this land in company with settlers who wished to make their home here. The history of these first efforts to establish our faith in this land is full of touching and tender recollections. In 1607 the first real settlement was effected in Jamestown, Va., and, as the colonies increased, the church grew, aided by that noble society for propagating the gospel in foreign parts. When the revolution began there were thirteen colonies in all of which the church was more or less strong. But the mother church had never appointed a bishop for the colonies. Political considerations growing out of the disturbed condition of things which followed the reign of James II had influenced the English parliament and the connection between church and state had tied the hands of the bishops. As soon however as our land had attained its independence a more determined effort was made to secure for our land what it ought to have had a hundred years before—a resident bishop. The church in Connecticut was the first to move in the matter and Dr. Samuel Seabury was chosen and went to England for consecration. The English parliament was not even then ready to do this honorable thing by America and so Dr. Seabury was forced to apply to the Episcopal church of Scotland. The nonjuring bishops of Scotland were ready and glad to extend the episcopate to our land and on the 17th of November 1784 Dr. Seabury was consecrated bishop of Connecticut.

Soon after this the impediments in the way of Dr. Seabury were removed by parliamentary action, and Dr. White and Provoost—the one of Pennsylvania, the other of New York—were consecrated in England by the archbishops of Canterbury and York. This was in 1787. Three years later Dr. Madison crossed over to England and was there consecrated bishop of Virginia.

This gave the church in America three bishops of its own who had received their orders from the English church. Three is the canonical number required to consecrating a bishop. The rule was made at Nice in 325 and has been followed everywhere in order to avoid any possible mistakes and also to guard the church against unworthy candidates. The first bishop consecrated in this country was Dr. Claggett for Maryland by the three bishops named above, Bishop White acting as senior officer. Since that time the succession of our bishops has gone on steadily, as a necessity required until now, when there are on the roll of those consecrated in this country 129 names. Of these, fifty-one I think are living.

Thus we trace our episcopate back through the English church, to the days of the apostles. It is a blessing for which all devout hearts are thankful. Without the episcopate we should be cut off from the great historical church of all time. We could have no part or lot in the fellowship of the heroes that have lived or died. The heritage of the ages is our heritage. We go back a hundred years and see White, Provoost, and Madison kneeling before the English prelates for their commission. Then back through the struggles of the reformation to the early English church. Back of them to Gaul and onwards, to cities where Paul preached and John taught. It is a glorious heritage. At the end is the risen Lord giving the first commission to those who should be his witnesses. Those witnesses have extended from Judea to our own coast, and every loyal churchman will forever value the great blessing. G. F. P.

COURTSHIP IN LUMPKIN

How George Anderson Made Use of Aunt Peggy's "Drops."

In Lumpkin county Georgia, there resides an old lady who is the mother of eight of the prettiest and best girls that have ever been wedded in our county. She has one left, and George Anderson, a young man who has been working for Aunt Peggy fell desperately in love with the young daughter and she with him. But as Aunt Peggy had numerous Anderson's in the family she concluded not to have any more and gave George the walking papers. A brother of George had married one of Aunt Peggy's daughters.

George concluded one day to go up and assist his brother in pulling fodder. George's girl and Aunt Peggy also went over. Aunt Peggy is subject to bad spells and always carries along her sachel, together with some drops to be administered to her provided she is taken ill. George knew this and says the Gainesville Eagle: we leave him to tell his own story:

"When I went in I was afraid to speak to Jennie and only went to get a drink of water. But seeing her wanting to speak anyhow said Good morning, Jennie. She in a fainting fit grabbed me by the arm and screamed, 'Catch me, George. Aunt Peggy' I caught her and shouted 'Turn him loose Jennie,' then I turned him loose. She pulled her loose and Jennie fell to the floor. Aunt Peggy, seeing what had happened, screamed, 'Lord have mercy,' and fell to the floor with one of her bad spells. Brother's wife came running in with him close behind and down she fell. What in the name of goodness was I to do? I remembered Aunt Peggy's drops and ran and found two bottles. Got the corks from them I could not, and thought to strike the necks off one against the other. I was so excited that I hit them together and about a peck of glass and 'drops' flew into Aunt Peggy's face and eyes. I wiped the glass off as best I could and smeared the drops all over her face. I saw it was no use, she was dead, and set to work to save Jennie. She soon revived, and drew a long breath and asked, 'George, where's mother?' There she lays over there dead, I replied. That made matters worse and I didn't know what in the d—l to do. I thought of water and put it on right freely, assisted by my brother. We now have them all on their feet again, and if I am spared don't think I will ever get into another such predicament."

I have been very sick over two years. They all gave me up as past cure. I tried the most skillful physicians but they did not reach the worst part. The lungs and heart would fill up every night and distress me and my throat was very bad. I told my children I never should die in peace until I had tried Hop Bitters. I have taken two bottles. They have helped me very much indeed. I am now well. There was a lot of sick folks here who have seen how they helped me, and they used them and are cured, and feel as thankful as I do that there is so valuable a medicine made. MRS. JULIA G. CUSHING.

A CLEAR HEAD.

"One year ago I was induced to try AYER'S PILLS as a remedy for Indigestion, Constipation, and Headache, from which I had long been a great sufferer. Commencing with a dose of five Pills, I found their action easy, and obtained prompt relief. In continuing their use, a single Pill taken after dinner, daily, has been all the medicine I have required. AYER'S PILLS have kept my system regular and my head clear, and benefited me more than all the medicines ever before tried. Every person similarly afflicted should know their value.

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

THE DAILY OREGONIAN.

THURSDAY MORNING, OCT. 25, 1883.

AN INEVITABLE CONSEQUENCE

This paper seldom poses as a prophet, but what THE OREGONIAN foretold in relation to the mutations of trade in our midst has already come to pass. The completion of the Northern Pacific road has caused trade to assume new conditions in our very midst. A new feature growing out of the completion of the road is the establishment here of manufacturers' agents, who come as factors, and do not come in contact with either the retailer or the consumer. One of these is agent for a large oyster house in Baltimore, as well as for one of the largest meat-packing houses west of Chicago. This last establishment is located at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, about 200 miles from St. Paul. It established a branch depot for the sale of its wares at Glasgow, Scotland, several years ago, and has never attempted any further branching out until the completion of the Northern Pacific road. Their agent in this city sells solely by sample, and does not as yet design carrying any stock. The other day he got a telegram informing him that two car loads of lard and bacon consigned to him had passed Helena. He took his samples into Wadhams, Elliott & Co's and sold them two tons of lard and a ton each of hams and side bacon. Going down to McCraken & Mason's he effected a similar sale at nineteen cents for bacon. Shortly afterwards he was met by a grocer doing business in the south end of town who said "I think I'll take a cask of your cured hams and two cases of bacon." "I regret I cannot sell them to you," said the factor, but I propose to protect the jobbers. The truth is, that as a manufacturer's agent I stand in the light of an importer, and must rely upon the jobbers to work off our goods."

Thus we see how, within thirty days after the opening of the Northern Pacific road, that trade begins to assume definite channels, as it has done in older and better regulated cities. In a few years more our Lewises, Maclays and McCrakens will be confining their operations to importations, while those who are doing family trade on the retail thoroughfares will come down upon Front street as jobbers, leaving their former claims to conduct retail operations. It is part and parcel of the history of every other commercial city, and must be part of ours.

At the same time, we regret to see the state of Iowa, admitting those bacon products to be superior to anything yet thrown upon the market, crowding out of our local markets the products of our farms. But the fact is that Oregon is not a corn-growing state, and wheat-fed pork is not equal to that fattened upon corn. The Pacific slope will never produce much corn, and, therefore, we shall have difficulty in competing with the corn growing states in "hog products," but surely the protection of distance ought to be a sufficient advantage to enable our farmers and packers to hold some part of the ground for a most valuable home industry.

AN INTERESTING POLITICAL SITUATION

Mr. Randall's supporters are greatly elated over the result of the Ohio election. They say it will make him speaker beyond a doubt. Mr Randall, they say, went to Ohio and made a number of speeches, spending both time and money in the democratic cause while Mr Carlisle, his competitor for the speakership, answered all invitations by remaining in Kentucky. Carlisle did not appear at all in Ohio during the campaign, while Randall was there "at the first bugle-call of the party and staid till victory was declared."

There is more of this than appears on the surface, and its bearing on the politics of the country has features of greater importance than would be presented by a simple contest for the speakership between two men of the same party, who were in substantial accord. Mr. Randall is the representative of the extreme protectionists of the democratic party. He went into Ohio proclaiming the doctrine of protection, and denouncing the republicans as unfaithful to it because they had reduced the tariff on wool—though the reduction was only nominal, and endeavoring by all the arguments he could command to show the producing and manufacturing classes that the democratic party was their best and most faithful friend, because it only could be depended on for complete and unselfish devotion to the policy of protection. In this he was supported by Hon. George L. Converse, democratic representative for the thirteenth district of Ohio and by a large number of other democratic speakers within and from without the state. The emergency required a campaign like this in Ohio; but how could a free-trade democrat like Mr. Carlisle of Kentucky, who is candidate for speaker of the house on the doctrine of "tariff for revenue only," participate in such a canvass? He could not possibly do so, and his non-appearance in Ohio, which is being used against him and in favor of Randall, was forced by the turn which the democratic protectionists gave to the campaign. This bit of history, though seemingly so unimportant, becomes highly interesting when viewed as an incident of the contest in the democratic party on the tariff question.

What position shall the party take on this question next year? This is the important and even alarming question. The free-trade element of the party is very strong in numbers, but the protectionists tell them that the party will be wrecked utterly even upon a revenue tariff platform. Inasmuch as the presidential election of 1884 will be decided mainly upon the record to be made in the coming congress it becomes a matter of deepest interest to the democratic managers to get around this most embarrassing question. The speakership is a most important element in it. Probably the democratic caucus will make a choice of some kind, and then the party lash will settle the question in favor of the caucus nominee, whoever he may be. What then? If Mr. Randall is elected he will appoint such a committee of ways and means—the committee which has charge of all bills relating to the raising of revenue—as will suppress the free trade or revenue tariff effort and protect the protectionists, but if Mr. Carlisle be elected he will make up that committee with an eye single to the revision of the tariff and the elimination of the protection features from it. No practiced observer can have much doubt that Mr. Randall will win. The party will lack the courage to push its boasted scheme of "tariff reform" when a president is to be elected.

The spontaneous outbreak of affection shown by the Spanish people for their young king in the recent misunderstanding with France should embolden that monarch to inaugurate several needed reforms in his country. The people of Spain are affectionate in their nature, Alfonso is young, and appears to be a man of fair intelligence. Should he seize this opportunity of advancing the educational and industrial progress of his people, he would earn a name more honored than that of any monarch of modern times.

The abolition of the stamp tax on matches and the reduction of the duty on imported matches has already broken the monopoly of the Diamond Match Company, which had driven all the smaller companies out of the business. The price of matches has also been reduced over fifty per cent, and smaller concerns are beginning to manufacture matches again. We trust the poor laborers will not suffer in consequence of the destruction of this monopoly and the distribution of business in the eastern states.

PREVENTION OF INSANITY

The removal of the insane wards of the state to the new asylum at Salem brings vividly before our minds the fact that we have a large number of such persons to support, with a prospect that the number will become much larger unless the causes of insanity are in some degree removed. We have according to the last census one insane person to every five hundred of our population. It is very gratifying, however, to know that insanity is to a large extent a preventable malady. Of 524 cases admitted to hospitals in Pennsylvania last year for which a cause was assigned, 112 were ascribed to intemperance, 60 to lasciviousness, 3 to the use of opium or tobacco, and only 117 of the whole number could be certainly classed as originating in accident or unpreventable disease. In this state intemperance is a leading cause of insanity. The saloons of Portland are thus increasing the burdens of the public as well as bringing a mental blight upon a large number of men. Uncontrolled passion of any kind causes much insanity. The indulgence of a violent temper has driven many people to the mad-house. In some of the newer communities, where the sense of responsibility is lessened, the uncontrolled passion becomes uncontrollable, and the increase of crime and insanity proceed pari passu. Any person who makes no effort to repress the foolish, passionate and insane thoughts who indulges in bursts of envy, jealousy or other evil desire, or who refuses to accept the loss of property, loss of friends, disappointed love and all the other anxieties and perplexities of life with reasonable equanimity and resignation, is contributing to this awful disease in himself. Another common cause of insanity is mental and social stagnation. In this country, as well as in Europe and particularly in this state insanity has a favorite breeding ground in lonely thinly populated districts, where the farms are far apart and where social enjoyments are hardly known. A large number of the insane of this state come from the lonely sheep ranches east of the Cascade mountains. In other parts of the state the hope and ambition which buoyed up the emigrant while crossing the plains, have been succeeded by ennui and despair. Some people have been oppressed by the thought that they had on reaching Oregon, come to the end of the world and that there was no future for them but a dull and confined life on the solitary farm. The influence of this depression unrelieved by any healthy mental or moral object of interest, has made many women especially weakened by overbearing, insane. We have not the latest report of the superintendent of the asylum at hand to obtain the data for anything more than these general remarks applicable to this state. But the causes to which we have alluded are especially fruitful here, and what we wish particularly to emphasize is that they are causes which may be removed or successfully resisted. We ought not to let a terrible evil like insanity grow up among us without trying to ascertain its causes, and so far as possible remove them.

A MILLIONAIRE LOAFER

In a recent conversation William H Vanderbilt gave utterance to the remark that he was "a loafer now and rather enjoyed the sensation." Doubtless he does. He has all the vulgarity and meanness contempt of his fellow men, and disregard for all claims of charity and humanity, that mark the loafer who has not a dollar. Inheriting a vast fortune acquired by unjust means he has increased it enormously by still more questionable methods, and with all the power that its possession gives him, is content to remain a loafer until compelled to leave his wealth by the inexorable demand of nature. A more contemptible character can hardly be found. That the power to accumulate such enormous fortunes indicates a flaw in our governmental regulations, is as true as that the time will come when the public whom Mr Vanderbilt so fervently 'damned' recently will exercise their just powers to limit the acquisition of wealth by such means as he has employed. No matter how distasteful to the 'loafer millionaire such a course would be, it will become a necessity. While the founders of our government did not limit the amount of wealth a man might possess, the accumulations of our present millionaires were hardly contemplated. They saw the dangers of centralization of power, but could not have realized the rapid growth of the speculative tendency among our people. Doubtless they considered it impossible that a man could accumulate so much wealth in a lifetime. The species of citizen exemplified in a Vanderbilt was considered impossible.

It is hardly gratifying to a lover of American institutions that the tendency toward monopoly of wealth in the hands of a few is so apparent, and so little is done to check it. Wealth in the hands of a Peabody, a Girard, or a Peter Cooper might well be met with no object on. Those men had a full realization of the duty they owed to humanity and the government that made their accumulations possible. In their hands it became a power for good. With it the cause of education was advanced, the sufferings of less fortunate ones alleviated, and men felt that their work in the world was good. What a pitiful figure this man Vanderbilt presents in comparison with either of them! They are venerated as heartily as the latter is condemned. They had love for their fellow men, he has a curse. Their memories will be held dear by the people long after Vanderbilt has been forgotten unless he be remembered by the expression of his father, the old commodore, who, in reply to a question, said he was "leaving his money to a d—n sight meaner man than he was."

An Olympia correspondent says that "two passes issued by the Northern Pacific, and six passes issued by the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company to members of the legislature were courteously but promptly returned. That was right. Members of legislatures ought not to allow themselves to be placed even in an equivocal position by the acceptance of passes. If the railways and other transportation companies are to issue passes at all to servants of the people, to state officers, judges and members of legislatures, they should be compelled to do so by statute law, as is done in New Hampshire, then public officers can use them if they wish to without compromising themselves in the least. The bill to prohibit the granting of passes to such officers in Washington territory failed in the council. If it had become a law it would have been easy for the railroads to evade it by selling season or mileage tickets at a nominal rate, as has been done in the state of New York. The use of free passes, or their equivalent by members of legislatures has been found to lengthen the sessions, at an increased expense to the people in several states, because free rides have tempted members to be absent from Friday till Tuesday of each week. It is more prudent, to say nothing of higher considerations, for legislators to be suspected of being on the people's side. It is proper to infer that the members who returned the passes mentioned above would not resent such a suspicion.

The announcement that John Bright will come to this country next year should be heard with pleasure by every true American. There has never been a stronger friend of our institutions in England. His sympathies were broad, and exhibited most when those institutions were in most danger of being destroyed. A man of the people himself, he loves the people, and his great heart has never failed to impart its kindliness to all his actions. We have expended millions in welcoming titled rakes and royal snobs, now let us give what is due to a great-hearted, honest man.

The story is now reiterated, with every appearance of truth, that Mary Anderson did refuse to receive the prince of Wales, on account of his immoralities and general low estimate of stage favorites. The American people will have a greater admiration of Mary than ever before if this be true.

A LOCAL DANGER

There is great danger that many parts of Oregon and Washington will be injured by the greed of the people who are now the owners of the land. Already, in anticipation of a great immigration next year, there is a disposition to attach fictitious values to land offered for sale. If this foolish policy should prevail generally, it would be a real and serious misfortune. Its natural effect will be to send new comers into the newer and poorer regions to cause the old settled districts to stand still, and to delay the development of the country. Immigrants who are reliant and intelligent enough to cross the continent cannot be beguiled into paying two prices for land, and the district which values itself too highly will surely be neglected and left to stagnate. The effect of this foolish spirit may be seen in the history of the Willamette valley. Who doubts that every large land holder in that valley would be richer today if ten years ago he had given half of his farm away to some thrifty new comer? If the people who now fill the Walla Walla country, Garfield county, the Palouse region and other parts of eastern Washington had been attracted by cheap lands to the richer country of the Willamette valley the general wealth of western Oregon would have been quadrupled by the doubled population. New blood would have stimulated enterprise, introduced new methods of farming, given variety to industry, built better roads and made better markets. And this could have been done. The advantages of soil, climate and nearness to market are all, or were all in favor of western Oregon and there too, was the objective point of most new comers, but they found land unreasonably high, they refused to pay the prices asked and pushed on to new and free fields. And they have made the wilderness of eastern Washington blossom, if not exactly as the rose, with more profitable crops. The new comers were people of energy and they have in every department of material enterprise pushed far ahead of western Oregon. The eastern country with its new blood is progressive, while the valley with its old stock is slow and thrives upon its unequaled resources rather than upon its energies. Another opportunity should not be missed. It would be better to give half the valley to new comers than to allow them to pass it by. It is time, too, for the farmers of eastern Washington to divide. They will find greater profit in smaller farms and in more neighbors. No section of the country is yet full and that which builds about itself the wall of high land prices will suffer for its greed.

A PERNICIOUS PRACTICE

There is an accomplished gentleman in one of the departments at Washington who was at one time chief clerk in the internal revenue bureau. He was strongly urged by thrifty friends when removed from the position under un-civil service regulations, to open an office in Washington for prosecuting claims against the government. But not being such a man as Stephen W Dorsey, one side of whom is opaque, according to George W Hooker's analysis, he declined on the ground that it did not seem honorable to him to use the knowledge and experience he had acquired at the public expense as an attorney against the government. It is needless to add that he is a rare man. The commissioner of patents Mr Marble, has lately resigned in order to begin practice before the departments as a patent solicitor and land attorney, and not long ago Green B Raum the commissioner of internal revenue resigned his position because having grown familiar with the whisky business inside he found he could make more money by aiding the whisky interests in evading the laws. Many other instances might be mentioned of officials resigning their positions to become the attorneys of individuals or corporations whose interests are frequently antagonistic to the government. There is nothing but a nice sense of personal honor to prevent this. It is one of the things which public sentiment is unable to prevent, because men with one side opaque do not care much for public opinion as experience has often shown. The strongest pressure of public opinion was powerless to stop Jay Hubbell's committee from levying assessments from every person in the federal service. Such persons are amenable only to that popular will which is expressed by laws and no law could be enacted to prevent this pernicious practice. Every man is at liberty to act for his own interest. The public generally perhaps would say that he was a fool if he did not, and our friend would be set down as one of those impractical, Sunday school men whom practical politicians esteem too good for this world. Impractical men have their use in this world, nevertheless. They are the salt of the earth, and without them society would rot.

The celebration of united Germany by the erection of a statue of Germania at Niederwald opposite Bingen on the Rhine the spot where the army passed and returned with the emperor who saluted the Rhine the first time as Kaiser was somewhat saddened by the reflection that the population of the empire is decreasing. The decrease has been great in Bavaria but the greatest of all in Alsace Lorraine. In Prussia proper and in Saxony there has been an increase. But in the whole empire there was a loss of 20 154 during the eighteen months from the 1st of January 1881 to the 30th of June 1882 instead of a gain of 750 000, as there should have been if the previous rate of increase had been maintained. It is not generally understood that for a long time previous to the thirty years war, Germany occupied in Europe a position relatively more influential and powerful than now. Her unity and power are not of this era only and if the present tendency to a decrease of population continues her golden age will be more than ever in the past. We have no cause to lament, for her loss is our gain. If the Germans cannot get our pork at home they will come here for it.

Objection is made to the admission of Washington territory into the Union under the name of Washington on grounds which are worthy of consideration, at least. The memory of Washington it is argued is the property of all the states and they have by common consent commemorated it in the name of the national capital, and for any particular state to take this name now is an assumption quite improper and out of taste. Instead of honoring the name it would rather discredit it by making it common and local. Besides the territory now called Washington was not part of the soil which Washington made free, in fact, of its very existence he was ignorant. We simply give these arguments as we have heard them stated. If the people of Washington territory should decide to relinquish the name of Washington, they would find in Tacoma a substitute locally appropriate, easily spelled and pronounced and highly euphonious.

Already Northern Pacific trains run through snow fields at intervals all the way from Idaho to St Paul. The snow is nowhere deep but these early falls are a foretaste of what may be expected later on. While there will certainly be difficulty in operating the road after storms in Montana and Dakota, it is not likely that there will be serious blockades. The methods which keep the roads open in Minnesota and the other northwestern states will without doubt prove effective on the Northern Pacific.

General Rosecrans would do himself credit if he would keep still about Chickamauga. His incompetence as a commander, exhibited on that eventful day, has passed into history, and no aide upon his chief of staff, who, after Thomas, did the most conspicuously gallant thing recorded upon that bloody field, will help the fame of a man who suffered a defeat which, but for the better conduct and superior abilities of his subordinates, would have annihilated the army.

The Northern Pacific's New Bonds.

New York Railway Gazette

The new issue of bonds will add $1,000,000 to the interest account at once although of course only about half that amount will have to be provided for the current fiscal year as the bonds cannot be issued before December. This will make the interest charges about $3 30 000 yearly and for this year about $3 100 000 will be required to pay those charges. The indications are that the road will provide that amount from its net earnings without doubt even though we regard the company's estimate lately published as a very sanguine one. The company will certainly be in a better position with its obligations funded in bonds whose obligations are known and fixed than with a floating debt of ill defined amount for portions of which provision must be made at frequent intervals.

THE CHAPMAN INQUIRY.

The Council Committee Look into the Charges Against the Mayor.

PRODUCTION OF THE ORIGINAL CONTRACT.

No Doubt as to its Authenticity—The Signatures Genuine—Tom Connell Connected With the Matter.

The committee appointed by the common council to investigate the charges of infamy which have been preferred against the official and political character of J. A. Chapman, now mayor of this city, met last evening in the council chamber at 7:30 o'clock. That is Councilmen Sears and Chittenden, a majority of the committee, were present, but Councilman Haley had seen fit to bring himself conspicuously before the people by his absence. It was hardly to be supposed that a man who had made himself an avowed champion of self-convicted venality in the council itself, speaking from his seat an apology for his shameless "boss," declaring that if the mayor had made a contract to peddle the city offices, it was his own private affair and the council had no right to meddle with it, and voting against an investigation—it was hardly to be supposed that he would attend the meetings of the committee and listen to the evidence of the mayor's guilt.

There were present beside the councilmen above named, the reporters of the daily press, John W. Cochran, official stenographer, policeman Henline as sergeant at arms, Messrs. Sidney Dell, H. T. Bingham, D. P. Thompson and H. W. Scott, besides a few spectators. Chairman Sears proceeded at once with the business before the committee, calling Mr. H. W. Scott, editor of THE OREGONIAN, as the first witness.

Before any questions were propounded Mr. Bingham arose in his seat and stated that Mr. Dell and himself represented Dr. Chapman, and that they protested against this investigation upon the ground that they had no power to act.

Sears answered that the committee were duly authorized, and proposed to investigate the charges published in THE OREGONIAN concerning the Chapman-Besser contract. It was not a trial, but simply an investigating committee. Dr. Chapman had been officially notified that there would be a meeting of the committee that evening, and if he desired he could be present. If he did not so desire there would be nothing compulsory in the matter.

The resolution under which the committee were empowered by the city council to investigate these charges was then produced by Chairman Sears and read. After which Sears stated that they would gladly listen to any defense the mayor, or those legal gentlemen for him, had to make.

Dell then spoke for nearly half an hour upon an incoherent subject, which he was pleased to call his protest. He said:

"I am much astonished at the extraordinary and unauthorized character of this investigation. It is one of the most unparalleled proceedings in the history of judicial affairs or of investigations. This committee is proceeding to investigate without having any specific charge. It is simply a 'nosing' committee to pry into not only the affairs of each councilman, but also those of the mayor. The protest which we present is based upon two grounds: First—That it is highly injudicious and exceedingly improper that any one should be tried upon a charge of so general a character; there should be some particularity. Second—We object to this proceeding, even if there were specific charges, as being one unknown under the law and nothing more than a gratuitous insult from one branch of the city government to another, over which they have no control. This committee has something of the nature of a privateering commission; and with all due respect to the gentlemen before me, they are like pirates upon the reputation of the chief officer of the city. Your meeting here can have but one purpose, and that is to blacken the fame of the mayor from malice or revenge."

Mr. Dell spun this kind of a speech out at much length, being finally interrupted by Mr. Sears, who stated that the committee's duty was plainly to carry out the instructions given them by the council, therefore, they would proceed at once with the investigation.

Mr. Scott, the first witness, then testified as to his connection with the infamous contract. He stated that he had seen the original of he contract between Chapman and Besser, and had with his own hand made the copy that was published in THE OREGONIAN. The original was placed for safe keeping in the hands of D. P. Thompson, where it still remains. His first knowledge of the existence of such a paper was obtained from Senator Dolph, who had a copy. He referred me to Thompson. Shortly afterwards Thomas Connell called at THE OREGONIAN office and accompanied the witness to Mr. Thompson's office, where Mr. Connell took the contract in question out of his pocket and handed to the witness to peruse. Witness, through familiarity with the handwriting, satisfied himself of the authenticity of the document, and stated that he intended to publish the knowledge he had gained. He, therefore, demanded as an assurance of good faith that the paper be left with some one. Connell agreed, the paper was given to Thompson, sealed up and placed in the latter's safe. Witness further stated that the original contract was written on a half-sheet of legal cap paper, and that at the time he saw it there was no other writing on the paper or upon anything attached to it. Connell also told witness that he saw the contract signed.

Hon. D. P. Thompson was next called, and corroborated the evidence of Mr. Scott in every particular. Furthermore, he produced the original document bearing the signature of Chapman and Besser, stating that he was familiar with the former's signature and had recognized it at the bottom of the contract. Witness followed this with a detailed account of how Connell first came to him about the paper, and how he was not satisfied with the way the contract had been carried out. He had advanced considerable money and put faith which has not been kept. When the paper was first shown to the witness there was another half-sheet on which was written a guarantee on the part of Connell that the $1000 a year mentioned in the contract should be paid to Dr. Chapman. Connell was not in a very amiable mood when he visited the witness at that time, and seemed desirous of getting back the money he had expended, or having some revenge out of it.

Mr. Dell asked the witness a great many questions, which brought forth nothing more than has already been stated, except that Connell did not say to witness how he came in possession of that paper.

At the close of this tedious questioning Chairman Sears announced that Mr. Connell could not be present this evening, consequently the committee would adjourn until Saturday evening, at the same time and place.

BRIEF MENTION.

To arrive to-night from St. Paul—Lieutenant T. Foltz and wife, J. S. Brooms and W. G. Blush and five second-class passengers.

Following the example of New York contemporaries, J. F. Halloran, publisher of the Astorian, has reduced the price of that newsy paper to fifteen cents per week, or $7 per year.

A Grand Army camp fire will be held at the hall of George Wright Post on Friday evening of this week. All comrades and all soldiers are invited to attend, and each bring a fence rail to swell the cheerful blaze.

Mr. Lincoln, bookkeeper at the Siskiyou tunnel, writes to Superintendent D. D. McBean, now in his city, that there are but slight hopes entertained of the recovery of Dorsey, who was shot at the tunnel a few days since in a drunken row with Sim Knight.

Lizzie Dean was arraigned in the police court yesterday on a charge of stealing $100 from Charles O'Connor, a stone mason. He swore that she put her hand in his pocket and took out the money. She swore that she "never did." The judge took the matter under consideration.

Persons who visit the art gallery at the fair will add greatly to their enjoyment while there by using a good pair of opera glasses in looking at the pictures. The glass magnifies and brings out more clearly all the beauties of the paintings without exposing the roughness visible on a near view of them.

The Home Guard is the name of a new temperance paper published at Corvallis, to be issued fortnightly. Will C. King is editor in chief, and T. V. B. Embree associate editor and business manager. One page, edited by Mrs. Will C. King, is devoted to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Much vigor and ability is shown in the initial number.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. G. J. Stearns of Oakland, Douglas county, is visiting at the residence of her brother-in-law, Judge L. C. Stearns, in this city.

Mrs. George Flavel and daughter, Miss Katie Flavel, of Astoria, were passengers on the Oregon for San Francisco where they will spend the winter.

Mr. W. B. Wells, one of Walla Walla's enterprising business men, has recently returned from a trip to California, accompanied by his bride. They spend several days visiting with the family of his brother, Dr. G. W. Wells of this city.

Miss Ida Haughey, daughter of Captain James Haughey of the Twenty first Infantry, returned to Vancouver garrison Monday from Stuttgart, Germany. Miss Haughey has been absent a year and a half, studying vocal and instrumental music, and has become an artiste.

O. A. Brown, for several years janitor at the custom house and deputy United States marshal, has resigned, and will go to Washington with Senator Dolph and family. The officials quartered in the custom house will miss him, but wish him success in his new service.

BOARD OF TRADE.

SPECIAL MEETING OF THAT BODY YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

Asking for a Change in Salmon Fishing Laws—Delegates to National Bankrupt Law Convention and National Board of Trade—Etc.

Pursuant to call, a special meeting of the board of trade was held yesterday afternoon at its rooms. President Donald Macleay occupied the chair. Secretary Arnold and a good number of members were present.

AMENDING THE FISHING LAWS.

The secretary read a communication from E. C. Holden, secretary of the Astoria chamber of commerce, asking an expression of the board relative to a memorial adopted by the chamber of commerce, praying the legislature of Washington territory to amend the law relating to fishing for Chinook salmon in the Columbia river, so as to make it unlawful to fish in April.

A memorial to the legislature, strongly indorsing the Astoria memorial, was passed by a unanimous vote.

DELEGATE TO NATIONAL BANKRUPT LAW CONVENTION.

Communications were read from the secretary of the board of trade of New York, asking this board to appoint a delegate to the national bankrupt law convention, which meets in Washington in December. Mr. C. H. Dodd said that the officers of the board had met yesterday afternoon to discuss the question of sending a delegate, and after talking the matter over, deemed it wise to refer the matter to the whole board. He thought the board scarcely able to bear the expense of sending a delegate, and offered a resolution appointing Mr. F. B. Thurber of New York the duly appointed delegate to represent the Portland board of trade in the convention, and instructed him to favor what is known as the "Lowell bill." The resolution was adopted.

DELEGATE TO THE NATIONAL BOARD OF TRADE.

Introducing the subject of the necessity of the Portland organization sending a delegate to the national board of trade, which meets in New York about the middle of next January, Mr. Dodd explained that at the last annual convention the improvement of the Columbia river was made the subject of special discussion. Neither Oregon nor Washington had a representative present to present her claims. He thought a good opportunity had then been lost; not that the national board could give direct aid, but as representatives of boards of trade throughout the Union they might direct the attention of congressmen of their respective districts to the necessity of a liberal appropriation for the Columbia river. If the subject came up at the coming convention, and the claims of the northwest were properly presented, much good might result. He moved, therefore, that a committee of three be appointed to canvass the matter, to learn whether sending a delegate would be feasible, and if so, to select a member who would likely consent to go; and to report at the next meeting. The motion prevailed, and Messrs. Thompson, Frindle and Arnold were appointed as such committee.

NO DISPOSITION TO JOHN DICK GERDES.

The secretary read a communication from R. B. Curry, city auditor and clerk, enclosing a resolution offered in the city council by the Honorable Richard Gerdes of the First ward, and passed by that body on the 10th inst., appointing a committee of three to act in conjunction with a committee of three to be appointed by the board of trade, to investigate certain alleged charges against councilman W. B. Honeyman in connection with the city dredge.

There was a general expression of opinion that the board did not care to assist the honorable Mr. Gerdes in venting his spite against a member of the council who did not approve of Mr. Gerdes' political methods and his peculiar "business," and the communication was tabled by a unanimous vote.

LOSS OF THE CAIRNSMORE.

Mr. Dodd moved that a committee of three be appointed to investigate the loss of the British bark Cairnsmore, or rather to learn whether an investigation was not necessary. In support of the motion Mr. Dodd said the loss would, as usual, be charged to the "dangers of the Columbia river bar." It is evident that the captain of the vessel was very ignorant or very idle. A court of inquiry was held at Astoria by consular agent Cherry and the masters of two British vessels, the latter overruling Mr. Cherry all the way through. The master of the Cairnsmore, when he said he kept the lead going constantly, did not stick to the truth. The speaker said he thought the Liverpool board of trade should investigate the loss. He had spoken to the consignees only a few hours ago, but they could not order an investigation. Both the Liverpool and the Portland boards of trade were entitled to know the exact truth.

Captain Ingersoll thought the proposed investigation unnecessary. The disaster was occasioned by unusually thick weather resulting from forest fires, and had been investigated by a presumably competent court. The master was not to be blamed. He was simply "besmoked" and "befogged;" so were the Queen of the Pacific and the C. B. Bryant. "I do not think," said Captain Ingersoll, "that this board has jurisdiction in the matter, and we'll show we can not do better not go so far, for we'll get beyond our depth."

Major Sears inquired whether the fact that the vessel was lost on account of extraordinary smoke was known at Liverpool, as well as here.

Captain Ingersoll answered that the English Lloyds had made an entry of the fact.

Mr. Dodd said that if it was deemed unwise to make an investigation, he would withdraw the motion, but the committee might go ahead and report at the next meeting, recommending whether an investigation should or should not be held.

The motion prevailed, and Messrs. Dodd, Ingersoll and Lowenberg were appointed as the committee. The board then adjourned.

PORTLAND'S FUTURE.

Mr. A. W. Campbell, editor of the Intelligencer, published in Wheeling, West Virginia, is engaged in writing some very interesting letters to his paper, from various points in his travels through this northwest country. After spending six weeks in traveling over Oregon and Washington territory, he writes from Portland, giving his views of the future of Portland and Seattle. We extract the following from his letter of October 1:

By the way, Seattle is the town that expects to be the Sound terminus of the Cascade branch of the Northern Pacific—the branch that deflects from the main line at Wallula, 214 miles east of Portland, and crosses the Cascade range at high and expensive grades, to the waters of the Sound. I have described the place to you in my correspondence to you from the Sound. It is the most important rival of Portland north of San Francisco, and is the seat of a vast lumber industry. What it will depend on when the lumber is used up, I cannot see, but as that day is a good way off as yet, no doubt that citizen John Leary, who is a big man of the town, would say, "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

There is another speculation that I have heard broached in connection with wheat shipments from the Oregon and Washington grain regions that may be of some interest in this connection. A curious person said to me the other day, why will not this wheat go over the Northern Pacific to Fort Benton, on the upper Missouri, and thence be carried down in barges to New Orleans? Fort Benton is about 3000 miles above St. Louis and is the head of navigation on the Missouri. It is some 700 miles east of Portland. Inasmuch as the wheat harvest is late on the Pacific coast, and inasmuch as the upper Missouri freezes over early in the winter, I do not suppose that such a project could amount to much. And the same objection applies to Duluth as a winter port of shipment. Wheat must move all winter from this coast, unless stored in elevators on speculation near the source of production. And, by the way, there really is a big elevator scheme on foot, that embraces the building of thirty or forty elevators by one company in Oregon and Washington for the storing of wheat, issuing of elevator certificates the same as in Chicago, or any other elevator point, thus enabling the farmers to hold the wheat as long as they desire by securing advances on it.

I conclude from all that I have seen and heard during my six weeks of sojourn and travel on this coast, that Portland is the most important point on it both now and prospectively. If it goes into manufacturing, as it seems somewhat disposed to do, and depends less wholly on commerce, its future will be all the more certainly and extensively assured. Unfortunately for the farmer this is not a country of diversified industries. It has but one occupation, that of raising wheat. The farmer here, unlike his brother of the Ohio valley, sells his products at the minimum price and buys other people's at the maximum. He depends wholly on a foreign market for the sale of his supplies.

A LETTER BY MR. NOAH BROOKS.

A View of Four Snowy Mountain Peaks from One City—Corporate Power in the Northwest.

PORTLAND, Or., Sept. 23.—This city has no professional "boomer," so far as I can see. Possibly the explanation of this apparent neglect to comply with the almost universal custom of the country is that Portland has already "boomed." It is a substantial, solid looking and even old appearing city. A large proportion of its population are from New England. Therefore the houses, the streets, and especially the business structures have a New England air about them. The gardens and shade trees remind one of Portland in Maine. Pervading the exterior of this chief city of Oregon is an air of permanency which immediately attracts the regard of the stranger who has journeyed through innumerable cities of great expectations, feverish with ambitious haste to reach Portland. The people live well. At one of the "swell" restaurants, the Delmonico's of Oregon, the other night, when a dinner was given to the visiting journalists and artists of the Northern Pacific excursion by THE OREGONIAN, everybody was surprised by the elegance of the entertainment. Before now I have had some small experience in dining, and I am bound to say that I never "assisted" at so satisfactory a banquet outside of the city of New York. This last reservation may be allowed to the cockneyism of a faithful New Yorker. The same quiet elegance and educated constituents of the good things of this life characterizes Portland society, so far as I have been able—a passing stranger—to catch a few glimpses of its surface. Climbing the hills in the upper part of Portland and looking off to the north and northeast, one's ravished gaze rests on three or four snowy peaks, Hood, Adams, St. Helen's, and when the air is very clear, Tacoma. Of these the nearest and most majestic is Hood, whose crystalline and symmetrical peak towers like a cloud, or is painted sharply against the blue sky, a most instant sight of every casual passenger along the streets. I cannot begin to describe the sensation of awe with which the frequent vision of this glorious mountain summit smites one as he looks up from the dust and turmoil of the streets and sees the immaculate whiteness of Hood brooding over all the scene. If the sage who said that no people ever lost its liberties who had a fall of water 150 feet high had seen Hood, I am sure he would have said that no community could fail to retain its nobility if it had constantly in sight a mountain summit covered with eternal snows. Hood is a perfect pyramid. Tacoma, from the same point of view, presents the appearance of a truncated cone. In point of fact, Tacoma has two summits, one loftier than the other, and when these are seen in a range with each other they suggest an extinct volcano with a strongly marked crater. It is a pity that Hood, Ranier, St. Helens and Baker, three of the most magnificent peaks in the world, should only perpetuate the names of four "old duffers," who happened to be admiralty lords when the far wandering Vancouver bestowed their names here with so much prodigality. The people of the region are doing what they can to change Ranier to Tacoma, but a latent tradition is likely to prove too strong for them. It is late in the day to change the names of these majestic monarchs of the great continental range, and one may as well be thankful that nothing worse than the tolerably euphonious patronymics of dead-and-gone nobodies cling to these peaks of snow.

Although Portland does not seem to require any booming, it is evidently a cause for great satisfaction with its people that the actual Oregon terminus of the Northern Pacific railroad system is here. What modifications may be made hereafter in the plans of the railroad people, nobody can tell. But at present, and for all practical purposes, Portland is the real terminus of the railroad. The terminus on Puget sound may be changed to terminal, for all that we can see. The road now lands its chief burden of freight and passengers at the little town of Albina, opposite Portland, on the Willamette, a point about ten miles above the junction of the Columbia with that stream. At present a ferry conveys the passengers across the river to Portland, but a bridge is being built and all rail communication will be complete next year. The bridge will be of a one, about 1600 feet long, with a swinging draw of 350 feet. The railroad company owns a long strip of frontage on either side of the river, and the enormous freight and passenger stations, shops, coal bunkers and round-houses now in process of construction show that the company's terminal facilities at Portland, East Portland and Albina are to be finished on a grand scale. To this extent, at least, Portland must be considered as the real Northern Pacific terminus.

One must needs wonder if the people of the region traversed by the Northern Pacific railroad, now so jubilant over the completion of the long desired highway of iron, will not waken up some of these days and murmur bitterly against the vast system of corporations that has intrenched itself amidst the homes of the people, in the choicest commercial centers of the region. Let us look over the long list of corporations comprising what is known as the Villard system of steam transportation. First, there is the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company. This corporation owns the railway line from Portland to Wallula Junction: 214 miles; from Umatilla Junction to Huntington, 223 miles. This last line is the Baker City branch, and is completed to the Blue mountains (73 miles), and will strike at Baker City the Oregon Short line," built by the Union Pacific company. The Oregon Railway and Navigation Company also own branch lines from Walla Walla to Dayton (thirty-seven miles), from Prescott to Riparia, on Snake river (thirty-six miles), and from Walla Walla to Pendleton (fourteen and a half miles), and it has about seventy-five miles of leased road. This same concern owns and runs the lines of ocean steamships plying between San Francisco and Portland, and San Francisco, Portland and Victoria and Puget sound ports; also about twenty-five river steamboats running on the Columbia and Snake rivers, from Astoria, Or., to Lewiston, I. T., and on tributary streams to the Columbia, as well as two or three costly iron steamboats now ready for the Seattle, Tacoma and Victoria line. Second, there is the Oregon Improvement Company, which appears to have "gobbled" the coal deposits of this part of the coast. The company owns large wharves, yards and coal bunkers in San Francisco, three 1600-ton iron steam colliers running between San Francisco, Portland and Seattle, and supplying the market as well as the steamers and locomotives of the "system" with coal, which is brought to and shipped from Seattle, a railroad bringing in the coal over the company's railroad from New Castle, thirty two miles from Seattle. These mines turn out 15,000 tons a month, and, with great fields of bituminous coal on Green river, forty miles from Seattle, belong to the before-mentioned corporation. Added to all this, the company owns 140,000 acres of agricultural land in Washington territory, 20,000 acres in eastern Oregon and vast tracts of timber lands in Washington. Next on the list comes the Northern Pacific railroad corporation, which, in the popular belief, has, like Aaron's serpent, swallowed all the rest. This concern owns and operates a railway line from St. Paul, Minnesota, to Wallula Junction (where it strikes the road of the Oregon Railway and Navigation company), a distance of 1897 miles. It also owns and runs the line from Portland to Tacoma, 144 miles, and a little branch line from Tacoma into the Puyallup hop region, a distance of thirty-one miles. The fourth item on the list of corporations in "the system" is the Oregon and Transcontinental Company which owns a controlling interest in the stocks of the Northern Pacific and Oregon Railway and Navigation Companies. The history of this corporation is unique, and is also well known. It was started for the purpose of combining the interests of the beforementioned corporations, and to build feeders and branches to the lines of these companies. The Transcontinental Company is building a branch from Palouse Junction, on the Northern Pacific, to Colfax, Washington territory, eighty-eight miles, with the intention of extending it to Moscow, Idaho, twenty-five miles, without delay. It has also one or two other minor branches connecting the various lines of Northern Pacific system. Its leased lines are the Oregon and California, running from Portland to Junction City, Lane county, 109 miles, and a main line running from Portland, on the east side of the Willamette, to Harrisburg, where it crosses the river and strikes the west side line at Junction City, and continues south to a point 170 miles from Portland. The remainder of the road to the California line, where it will strike the Oregon branch of the Central Pacific system, is under construction, and will be finished next year, there being about 100 miles yet to be built. The fifth and last member of this interesting family of corporations is the Northern Pacific Terminal Company. This corporation, which was started last spring, is organized for the purpose of providing terminal facilities, stations, shops, coal bunkers and elevators for the other members of the aforementioned system. It owns 200 acres of ground in Albina, a considerable tract in the adjoining corporation of East Portland, and a water front more than a mile and a half long in the two places. On this property are now building stations, shops, etc., in vast proportions. The company also owns docks and coal bunkers already built, and is now erecting mammoth passenger and freight stations. The stock of the concern is owned by the Northern Pacific Railroad, the Oregon Railway and Navigation and the Oregon and California Railroad Companies. The total amount of stock represented in the so-called Villard system of steam transportation is about $200,000,000. The corporations, to all appearances, control every possible avenue of commerce in Washington territory and Oregon, reaching far into California, and up into British Columbia. How soon will this monster become a terror and a menace to smaller enterprises which employ the energies of the people?

OREGON BLOOD PURIFIER

THE MECHANICS' FAIR.

There was a decided increase in the attendance at the fair last night over that of the night before. The corridors were "comfortably filled" and the lower floor and the floral garden, as usual, were thronged.

The exhibit of ladies' fancy work, which occupies the space at each end of the art gallery, is among the artistic attractions of the fair, and ladies hover about it in great numbers. The exhibit includes a hundred varieties of work, each to the masculine eye seeming the perfection of delicate prettiness. It is to the credit of the ladies of Portland that their department is so complete and beautiful.

Special Exhibits.

FINE CRAYON WORK.

The fine free hand crayon work of the well known and favorite local artist, Mr. E. W. Moore, attracts much attention and is very greatly admired. There is a striking strength and beauty about these productions which show the master hand. This class is becoming very popular, and Mr. Moore is doing an artistic service in his city. His portraits are life-like, and their cheapness recommends them to the many who cannot well afford expensive work in oils. Indeed, not a few prefer the crayons, regarding them as more truthful likenesses and better specimens of art than any but the very best oil portraits, which it is, of course, impossible to have done in Portland except at the rare times when we are visited by first class painters. It is only necessary to examine the work from Mr. Moore's studio to see to what perfection free hand drawing has grown of late.

CLOTHING AT THE FAIR.

If it had not been for A. Roberts, the enterprising clothier of this city, people visiting the fair this year would have missed a great deal. The display in his line made is one of the attractive and interesting features of the fair. The little statuettes, so life-like, artistic and handsome, display to advantage the different styles of boys' and youth's clothing, of which Mr. Roberts carries the only complete stock in Portland. His exhibit of gent's furnishing goods could be made by no other merchant in the northwest, while the new and nobby styles in men's clothing never was equaled in any previous fair. The exhibit is made by selecting at random from his general stock, and was not gotten up especially for the fair; in fact, finer goods in each special line can be found in his store than are exhibited in the pavilion. Visitors from the interior should call at his store, corner First and Alder streets, and take a look over his elegant stock before they return home.

FRANK G. ABELL

Can consider himself boss in the photograph business from this henceforth. In fact, it is hardly probable any one will attempt to compete with him in the future. The exhibit at the pavilion represents his general work, and cannot be surpassed.

FOSTER & ROBERTSON

Are receiving the highest praise for their artistic display at the fair this year. But few would believe until now that such a beautiful and attractive display could be made by goods selected from a hardware store. The exhibit of chandeliers, gas fixtures, mantels, fountain statuettes, etc., far surpasses anything of the kind ever seen by the writer in the San Francisco mechanics' fairs.

THE GIANT BAKING POWDER

Can be heard from in many a household now where it was a stranger at the beginning of the fair. It will lead in the market henceforth.

THE PACIFIC MATTRESS CO.,

Whose elegant display of mattresses, spring beds, sofa beds, etc., are attracting all by the acknowledged superiority of their goods. Their display is located at the southwest corner of the main gallery, where admiring crowds of visitors linger to view the specialties exhibited at their booth.

G. SHINDLER & CO.

Cannot complain of any lack of interest their exhibit has awakened. Everybody is talking about it. As leaders in the furniture line they deserve especial mention.

GUMP & CO.

Have firmly established their right to be called the leaders in their line, and we think none will dare dispute that right in future.

THE FLOUR

Which attracts so much attention in products hall is made by the Oregon Milling Company. When you want the best flour made order this brand, and our word for it you will get just what you want.

D. W. PRENTICE

Ought to be a happy man. Everybody seems to think his Weber piano and the Estey organ, for which he is sole agent, are the best instruments in the land. His establishment at 107 First street is crowded to its utmost capacity with a most complete stock of brass and string instruments, all of the best make in the land, and sold at prices which cannot be shaded by any house in the northwest.

JOHN D. DAKINSON

Sweeps the field in the sewing machine line. He guarantees every machine he sells. Keeps them in repair without cost to the purchaser. Sells only the best machines. Never represents a machine other than it is. Has numerous makes of machines, comprising the famous Household and all the other popular machines. Gives intending purchasers a chance to make a test of different machines while side by side. Gives a purchaser the privilege of returning a machine and exchanging it for one of a different make should they become convinced that any other kind would suit them better; and presents many other honorable methods in his business which makes him a safe man to deal with.

J. H. ROBBINS & SON,

Who are sole agents for the renowned Steinway pianos, and also for the justly celebrated McCammon piano, are doing a rushing business at their elegantly equipped store on First street, between Salmon and Main. The McCammon piano is one of the best make in the land, and being so low in price it naturally commands a large sale. The next time you are at the pavilion go to their booth and listen to its full, rich tones.

THE POSTOFFICE CANDY STORE

Is where all those delicious candies are made which are dispensed by Mr. Dunner at the fair.

THE "LITTLE GIANT" STECK

Piano still attracts much attention from many visitors, who linger near Gardner Bros.' booth to listen to its sweet notes.

CLIFF WASS'

Exhibit of ladies' wigs and a general assortment of hair goods far surpasses anything of the kind ever seen in Oregon. Call on him at No. 64 Morrison street.

CHAS. LOUIS KUHN

Ought to have the first prize for the best billiard table ever placed on exhibition by anyone in the northwest.

RUSSELL & CO.'S

Threshing machines and saw mill machinery will no doubt meet with a larger sale the coming season than ever. We have yet to find the lumberman who does not say that this portable saw mill is the most perfect, strongest, lightest and most desirable and valuable mill for this section than was ever before placed in this market. Their New Massillon thresher is regarded in the same light by the farmers, and if any thresherman attempts to get the patronage of the farmers with any other machine he will get badly left.

THE EAST SIDE.

HOUSE ROBBED IN DAYLIGHT.

A bold daylight robbery was committed on Wednesday of last week, at the residence of Mr. J. L. Shute, on Fifth street, between V and W, Stephens' addition. The matter has been kept secret for the purpose of aiding in the discovery of the perpetrators, but this not having been accomplished, further secrecy is not deemed necessary. During the temporary absence of the occupants in the forenoon of the day stated, the house was entered and ransacked from top to bottom. About $80 in coin was taken from the pocket of a pair of pantaloons that were hanging in one of the rooms, and several other valuable articles convenient to carry were appropriated. The thief also took all the keys that came under his observation, indicating him to be a professional. From the number of robberies committed in East Portland recently, it would appear that a gang is constantly engaged watching opportunities for plunder and some incline to the belief that they reside on the east side, as carrying the booty across the river would sooner or later result in detection. There is some little talk of citizens organizing for their protection and detection of the thieves, but meantime the form r should each constitute himself a committee of one to see that his place is properly secured, and to keep himself "fixed" for an emergency.

NOTES.

The diphtheria scare is subsiding. Mr. Newell's children are rapidly convalescing.

Coley Barrel will open his wholesale and retail grocery store in the Hall & Stout building next week.

The Ministerial association will meet in conjunction with the Women's Christian union at the M. E. church to-day at 2 P. M.

Mr. Leathers, of Leathers & Foss, returned last Tuesday night from a brief visit to his old home at Grand Rapids, Michigan.

The gravel road-bed which is being laid under the O. & C. trestle-work has reached the L street depot, the planking of which was torn up yesterday for the purpose of dumping the gravel underneath.

The first hop of Sumner post G. A. R., at Scppach's hall last night was not as well attended as it doubtless would have been had better weather prevailed. Those present, however, which included several from Portland, danced away merry evening to the music of Professor Parrott's band.

An unusual amount of smoke in the Home hotel, Tuesday night, led to the discovery that a lodger named Wheeler had thrown a lighted cigarette on the floor of his room before retiring, the fire communicating to the carpet and the straw underneath. Wheeler was sweetly oblivious of the danger his careless action had caused, and the timely discovery doubtless prevented disastrous results.

SALEM NOTES.

Moss' minstrels are billed to speak here to-morrow (Thursday) evening. They gave universal satisfaction on the occasion of their former visit, and will no doubt have a good house on this occasion.

His excellency the governor has made the following executive appointments: S. S. Train of Harrisburg, Sol Abraham of Roseburg, Keeler H. Gabbert of Myrtle Creek, John T. Simpson of Grand Ronde, George C. Fulton of Astoria, E. B. Reed of Portland and J. H. Berry of Junction, notaries public for the ensuing two years.

Rev. Samuel Savons, a colored minister of Portland, is in this city canvassing among our business men, with a view of securing aid in bringing to this section of the country from the eastern and southern states colored girls and women to serve as domestics and kitchen help. He bears excellent credentials and apparently deserves support and encouragement.

Miss Fannie Odenal of this city will leave for Portland this morning, where she will join Hon. and Mrs. J. N. Dolph, accompanying them to Washington City, D. C., where they will spend the winter. Miss Odenal is a brilliant and accomplished young lady, who in the capital society circles will reflect great credit upon our state. She has a host of friends who wish her a pleasant trip and an agreeable sojourn in that city.

YAMHILL NOTES.

Since potato digging began spuds are more numerous and cheaper.

Wheat sown this fall is coming up nicely. Stubble land is not quite wet enough to plow yet.

City election notices are posted, billed to come off November 5; six councilmen, one mayor, one recorder and one marshal.

R. J. Lancefield, who had his thigh broken on Saturday evening, is improving slowly. He is confined at the residence of J. S. Martin.

It's a decided mistake about ' sawmillers losing so much money on the foot-race. They do not gamble. They are among our most sober citizens. They are very sedate and might even be mistaken for a funeral procession.

THURSDAY MORNING, OCT 2 1883

A SHORT REVIEW.

Reflections on the State of Theology and the Views of Mr. Beecher and Others

BUTTEVILLE Oct 21

To the Editor of The Oregonian

Genius discovers elucidates and creates new combinations; talent, following, is quick to comprehend and adopt.

If Mr Murray, from whose recent lecture at Chickering hall, New York city The Oregonian gave a few short extracts is not a genius he is at least endowed with sufficient capacity and courage to think and speak for himself

Perhaps there has been no time since the powerful pagan emperor, Constantine embraced Christianity and convoked the first Ecumenical council in the year 325 when superstition and the doctrine of the divine inspiration of the writings of Moses have had less hold on the minds of men than in these closing years of the nineteenth century Science has enlarged the field of man's thought as it has the narrow limits of his imputed birthplace Scientific exploration has discovered that all the world was man's Eden, and he who desires to test the soundness of the doctrine of book inspiration by scientific methods the Pentateuch is the first in order that should claim attention as it is in fact the foundation upon which all book inspiration is based

The doctrine of evolution is a comprehensible, humane doctrine, that exonerates the Jehovah of the Hebrew from the most relentless cruelties imputed to him by Moses and the prophets, while it does no violence to reason observation and experience No triumph gained upon the old battleground in defense of religious liberty since the adoption of our national constitution, nearly 100 years ago, will better serve the true interests of mankind than the grand intellectual victory that reason has gained over blind faith and religious intolerance. Especially do the people of this great republic owe a debt of gratitude to the memory of those noble minded old patriots like Benjamin Franklin and his compeers in and out of the convention, that framed the paramount law that guards the rights and equalizes the privileges of men. They were thoroughly conversant with the history of the religious wars that for more than a thousand years had devastated the old world They also well understood that if the first object of instituting governments among men is to protect life and property, the second should be a fundamental guarantee that the government shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof nor shall there be any religious test required as a qualification to any office under the government of the United States I have been led into this latter train of thought by reading, in the Sunday Oregonian an extract from the Californian Christian Advocate reflecting on Mr Beecher for exercising his right to think speak and decide for himself with regard to the divine inspiration of the old testament One may easily infer that Mr Beecher after having given the subject a sifting examination for fifty years is better prepared to decide understandingly for himself than the Advocate (unless it be inspired) could possibly do for him The Advocate says "In this money making trip his reputation has constantly been damaged by his ribald attacks on the faith of his father, and the church of all ages Ingersoll never did half the harm Henry Ward Beecher has done to religion It is enough to make Lyman Beecher turn over in his grave; his degenerate son has disgraced him and brought reproach upon the pulpit upon science and religion Is it in truth, a reproach upon science to differ in belief from the statement in the first and second chapters of the bible that heaven and earth with all that is therein were created in six days? Is it a reproach upon science to express disbelief in the bible story that the sun and moon stood still at the command of Joshua? It would hardly be considered a reproach upon science that Mr Beecher should repudiate an ancient the logical method of accounting for physical phenomena as the direct result of the pleasure and displeasure of deity

What a charitable encomium on the bright galaxy of eminent scientists who have lived and labored for the enlightenment of mankind since the days of Copernicus and Galileo Why the great and good Humboldt a colossus in the field of natural science, for three-score years of faithful, unbroken labor gathering a wealth of knowledge from every penetrable source and climate the like of which has never been equaled by a single mind and yet he thought it no reproach upon science or the truths of religion when he proclaimed to the world that "the universe is governed by eternal immutable law

A system of religion whose professed mission is to eliminate error and advance truth at the same time ignoring reason observation and experience in its theological teachings cannot under a free, enlightened government long hold submissive line the young men of vigor that is born of genius Hence the handmaid of liberal education has well nigh broken the power of blind credulity and is fast liberating the public mind from the grasp of the idle fancies of the past For the dissemination of advancing knowledge the people are indebted to the fundamental law that guards the right of free speech and protects the freedom of the press Only for these most radical departures from the close communion virtues of his puritan fathers Mr Beecher would not to-day be permitted to deliver his lecture on "Evolution and Revolution" in his native New England home Galileo's science proved more reliable than Moses' inspiration for now we all know that the world does move and the knowledge of men advance. Everywhere in every vocation of civilized life may be found innumerable men and women asking themselves questions like the following "Can it be true that an immutable God, the father of mercies could have said to Noah, I will destroy man whom I have created from the face of the earth both man and beast and the creeping things and the fowls of the air, for it repenteth me that I have made them I will bring a flood of waters upon the earth to destroy all flesh wherein is the breath of life Then followed by direct act of Jehovah the most overwhelming destruction of innocent life that could have been inflicted upon a doomed world. What mind or what being could imagine a more relentless cruelty than the following "And every living substance was destroyed which was upon the face of the ground, both man, and cattle and the creeping things, and the fowls of heaven and they were destroyed from the earth and Noah only remained alive and them that were with him in the ark " Is it in derogation of truth to say That the wonderful things performed by Aaron and Pharaoh's magicians with their rods, commencing with the seventh chapter of Exodus, which in their dire results call up every sympathy within the human breast for the suffering of the Egyptian people the heart of whose king was hardened by Jehovah that he might show his power by inflicting upon their land, their water, their atmosphere cattle and people, a class of loathsome, pestilential evils that stand without a rival in all the wide range of profane fable

Enlightened belief is not a voluntary operation of the mind, but the inevitable result of reason, observation and experience Love, justice and mercy, in their moral perfection, belong only to deity and that which violates these attributes cannot proceed from a perfect being. Hence Mr. Beecher's fine discriminating sensibilities will not permit him to ascribe those shocking things that are found in the Pentateuch to the God of love nor believe he inspired Moses to record them While to say that he concurred in belief with the advocate would be to deny his honest conviction and bring reproach upon all he holds most sacred

A strained construction of a word or passage is generally resorted to as a sort of last chance of escaping the effect of the plain true intent as in the case of the six days occupied in creating the universe, and now construed by theologians to mean six periods of thousands of years each But the word "day," as used by the inspired writer cannot long bear up under such an immense construction as the Evolution pure and simple as illuminated by the science of geology offers a more permanent relief

The text informs us that "God divided the light from the darkness, the light he called day and the darkness night and the evening and the morning were the first day Then on the fourth day lights were made in the firmament of the heaven, to divide day from the night and for signs and for seasons and for days and for years and to give light upon the earth—the greater light to rule the day and the lesser light to rule the night he made the stars also Those people who had lived thousands of years before and after the time of Moses, like him had died without knowing the true natural cause that divides each twenty four hours into light and darkness Reason observation and experience have been man's great teachers in the past and in the future must so continue to be W H R

WINSTON Forsyth Co. N C

Gentlemen—I desire to express to you my thanks for your wonderful Hop Bitters. I was troubled with dyspepsia for five years previous to commencing the use of Hop Bitters some six months ago. My cure has been wonderful. I am pastor of the First Methodist Church of this place, and my whole congregation can testify to the great virtues of your bitters.

Very respectfully, REV. H. FEREBEE.

THE "EIGHTEEN"

Dalles Times Mountaineer

The following is the letter of Hon T W Davenport to Colonel Lang published in the last Sun. It is a clear refutation of the trumped-up charges against the eighteen

SILVERTON Oct 15 1883

Col T S Lang, Editor of Sun—My Dear Sir In the Wasco Sun of September 29 in an editorial with the heading Ex-Senator Mitchell is the following language He [Mitchell] was deceived and sold out by eighteen men of his own party who followed the lead and promises of men who are traitors to the republican party, and who acted out their well known character and who did not dare to show their snake heads in daylight If the republican party of to day accepts and swallows these eighteen men and their selfish disorganizing bosses it will part company with men a man who will not march no longer of that Arnold brigade of traitors, etc

Horace Greely once said that he admitted the right to lie, but that it is a right which is subject to limitation, about as much latitude as has ever been claimed for the press None will admit your right under this ruling to call me traitors member of the wretches members of the Arnold brigade or any other epithet which seems to suit your humor at the time but it seems to me that you are outside of the limits when you assert that Mr Mitchell was deceived and sold out by the eighteen members of the legislature who could not be induced by argument or promise of office or by constraint by caucus rule to support him for the senate I do not believe that you can name one member who steadily refused to support, who deceived Mr Mitchell or sold him out

Mr Lang that averment of yours is not true Those men never told Mr M. that they would support him for the senate either before or after their election to the legislature The nine members from this county (Marion) so, that they were so bound of being there in the interest of Judge Boise said publicly that they had made no promises to any one had no understanding directly or indirectly with any one that they were entirely free to select any person they might think the best man for the place under the circumstances Until further advice I shall believe that you have no particle of evidence going to show that the other persons composing the solid eighteen ever entered ever betrayed or deceived or sold out Mr Mitchell Some politicians are very easily deceived They take a shake of the hand, a nod as a recognition or any sign of friendship as a pledge of support Probably the solid eighteen was composed of gentlemen who hope the Mr Mitchell kindly and fully recognized his services to the state and to the republican party, and yet I presume Mr M did not consider such practice of the ordinary amenities of life in the light of pledges of any service more than gentlemanly conduct It is hardly that could not fully understand the solid eighteen and it would be a ll enough to maintain a party to ascertain if you have it in your power to accomplish it

Please give this note as wide a circulation as you gave your charge I W DAVENPORT

The answer of Colonel Lang to the plain and cutting language contained in the above occupies a column, and is the weakest effort of the kind we have ever read He virtually admits that he has no proof to support his charge of the eighteen being bought when he says that he cannot state what the inducements were which were brought to bear upon them and saves it as a bare assertion not worthy of refutation. The statement that these men proved traitors to their party and turned this section over to the railroad interests, is as true of the thirty six who would vote for no republicans but Hons J H Mitchell and J N Dolph The eighteen offered to support any other republican for senator but Mr Mitchell the thirty six or thirty four would support only two men or that office both of whom were at the time in the interest of the railroad We are willing to leave the people to judge which are the greater traitors to political principles and the interests of eastern Oregon—those who would support only two men both in the railroad interests or those who would vote for any man in the party but one and were then forced to support a railroad man on account of the persistent obstinacy of the bosses The people will decide in this matter as they have all over the land that the caucus rule and republican principles are in opposition and will brand them as traitors who attempt by means of rings and cliques to rule the organization This defeat the feature of boss rule was fully exemplified in the action of the chairman of the county committee when he attempted to force upon the republican voters of Wasco a candidate of his own naming, and which is the cause of the rupture in the party in this section

Sullivan Talks

Baltimore American

"I now tip the beam at 22 " said Sullivan the champion in a little chat with an American reporter at night behind the scenes at the Central theater How is the ring business now asked the reporter

"It's not very good There is not much in it The glove contests are growing more popular and a settle with the milling no matter how lively is not often interrupted

Sullivan further said that he did not like being called "the slugger" as it is a ruffianism title which he does not fancy Al Smith his manager says that there will probably be a glove fight between Sullivan and Paddy Ryan in Boston in December

WAKEFIELD, Ia —Dr A F Hanak says "I use Brown's Iron Bitters proves its superiority over all other tonic preparations

TRADE AND COMMERCE.

WEDNESDAY Oct 4

A generally quiet day along the street ruled a light rain in the forenoon seeming to add its influence The outgoing steamer manifest included a car of bottled beer from Milwaukee The shipment left St Paul the 13th inst, arrived here yesterday and was immediately put into the steamer This is the first through shipment to San Francisco of over land freight The Queen of the Pacific brought in a light freight and the Oregon sailed with a rather better cargo than outgoing steamers have lately been carrying for some months

FREIGHTS—A dull and uninteresting market is continued There seems not the slightest disposition on the part of exporters to take up new tonnage

WHEAT—Local market firm to buy and it is currently reported that 71c or about $1 64 per cental here is being paid at Walla Walla This has driven some buyers out of the field Valley transactions are almost entirely confined to milling and are on basis of $1 60@1 62 here This is being paid in the face of dull and lower markets abroad and can be but be a price at loss of $1 to $2 per ton to shippers Imports into the United Kingdom of wheat and flour at during the past week were 46 000 quarters The New York and Chicago markets are dull and irregular

SHIPPING NOTES

The Oregon sailed at A M with 417 tons of freight

The State of California sailed from San Francisco at 10 A M

The auxiliary schooner Bella was on berth at San Francisco the 13th inst for Portland to sail this week

The Martaban came up this morning and docked at Greenwich

The Walla Walla's lighter barging coal at the Oak street

The bark Ocean will lighter part cargo at Astoria

The schooner Jessie Nickerson sailed from San Francisco on the 19th inst for Columbia river

The barkentine Portland sailed from San Pedro on the 19th inst for Astoria and the schooner due nem for Puget Sound

The new British ship made the run from Queenstown to Sandy Hook in days hours and minutes While the time has been beaten yet the steamer has shown herself to be the fastest of all. She made miles in the 13th inst and hours run which is the best by some 16 miles ever logged. Coming over she experienced strong head winds high seas and fogs which caused delays

Among the vessels in port to that are for the ship Henry Villard for Puget sound and the Edward Fenn for China Japan ships Young America Lucile from St Francisco with the Singapore Hong Kong

Ship A B arrived 1217 tons and ship Carrie Clark 14 tons have been sold on German account terms private The latter has had name changed to Anna

COMMERCIAL NOTES

The total number of immigrants landed at various ports of the United States in September was 40 1 against the same month last year

Last year's crop of oranges in Florida was reckoned at 50 000 000 This year it is put at 60 000 000 and at per box is worth $1 500 000

Advices received from New York state that a gentleman who has just returned to San Francisco from a visit to Scotland has successfully negotiated the sale of a large area of California timber lands for a sum ranging between $1 500 000 and $1 750 000 to an undertaking recently organized in Scotland under the style and title of the California Red Wood Company

N Y Shipping List Investigation of the more important of the recent failures in this city and in Boston shows that a very large proportion of the aggregate assets had been secured in advance to preferred creditors leaving very little property for the creditors who were not preferred There is no law to prevent this species of swindling but there ought to be The national bankrupt law which was repealed a few years ago, prohibited preferences but it was so complicated and expensive that it used up almost everything leaving little or nothing for creditors Our state insolvency law has a reference clause the elimination of which by the legislature has been urged by the chamber of commerce But a better way to overcome the evil would be to enact the amended Lowell draft of a national bankrupt law that would place all creditors on an equal footing As the case now stands merchants and manufacturers are at a loss to know to whom to grant credit A purchaser may show assets largely in excess of liabilities but such a showing is worth nothing if the bulk of the property may be passed into the hands of friends or relatives in the advance of failure In view of the recent fraudulent practice of preferring creditors it is no wonder that confidence so necessary in business should be seriously impaired that credit is ... should have become suspicious and that all classes should suffer the consequences Honest business men should move in self defense for a national bankrupt law
